In this message we point out that particles bearing properties of both matter and anti-matter were as well predicted without any connexion with particle physics, but on the basis of pure mathematics, namely — neutrosophic logic which is a generalization of fuzzy and intuitionistic fuzzy logics in mathematics.

Plastic-Free Beth Terry, 2012-06-15 Like many people, Beth Terry didn't think an individual could have much impact on the environment. But while laid up after surgery, she read an article about the staggering amount of plastic polluting the oceans and decided then and there to kick her plastic habit. Now she wants to teach you how you can too. In her quirky and humorous style—well known to the readers of her popular blog, My Plastic-Free Life—Terry provides personal anecdotes, stats about the environmental and health problems related to plastic, and personal solutions and tips on how to limit your plastic footprint. Terry includes handy lists and charts for easy reference, ways to get involved in larger community actions, and profiles of individuals—Plastic-Free Heroes—who have gone beyond personal solutions to create a change on a larger scale. Plastic-Free also includes chapters on letting go of eco-guilt, strategies for coping with overwhelming problems, and ways to relate to other people who aren't as far along on the plastic-free path. Both a practical guide and the story of a personal journey from helplessness to empowerment, Plastic-Free is a must-read for anyone concerned about the ongoing health and happiness of themselves, their children, and the planet.

Indirect Taxation in Developing Countries Ary Lars Bovenberg, 1986-09-01 Indirect taxes are an important element in stabilization tax packages that aim at raising revenue in the short run. This paper evaluates, by using a general equilibrium model, alternative instruments of indirect taxation in middle-income developing countries. It uses data for Thailand as an illustration and examines the effects on revenue, efficiency, equity, and international competitiveness. The paper shows that the interaction between taxes and distortions caused by various policies can be important for revenue and efficiency. It also reveals significant backward shifting and a link between outward-looking supply-side tax policies and trade policies in industrial countries.

The Missing Alphabet Susan Marcus, Susie Monday, Cynthia Herbert, 2012-10-23 The future will belong to children with innovative minds. Which is why this team of education experts have drawn on their decades of applied research in creativity, individuality, play, and media to craft an engaging guide for parents who understand that creative thinking skills are no longer a luxury, but a necessity for success in the new, grown-up world of work. The book introduces the Sensory Alphabet, basic building blocks that are as powerful for building twenty-first-century literacies as the ABCs are for reading—and that are lacking in schools today. The Missing Alphabet also offers foundational knowledge, current research and a pragmatic path for parents to understand the individual strengths and creative potential that will help their own children learn productively in the future. To turn these ideas into action, there is a Field Guide full of resources and activities for parents and kids to explore together at home, in museums, and around the neighborhood. This tried-and-true approach engages children with the creative thinking process, the capacity to invent with many media, the ability to think across disciplines, and the reliance on (and joy in) the imagination. Over the past forty years, the authors have developed highly successful programs for both in and out-of-school settings based on these concepts. Now, they offer parents a comprehensive guide for building the confidence and creative thinking skills for their own children—and now urgently needed for our collective future.

Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1837 edition. Excerpt: ... 103 printing-press. Mamma, I am sorry that you could not go with us to see the printing-press to day, for it was very entertaining. And look, said Lucy, I am not covered with printer's ink, as you said I should be. If you did not take care, my, dear, I said. Did not I? Yes, mamma; but I did take care, you see, for I have not a single spot, and yet I saw everything perfectly. Mamma, you have seen printing so often, I suppose, that it would be tiresome to describe it to you. And I shall only tell you, that it was done almost exactly as is explained in our 'Book of Trades, ' in the chapter of The Printer. Do you remember my reading it to you, mamma? and the picture of the letter-press printer? And at the end it was said, that, after reading this, young people should endeavour to go through a printing-office. I asked you directly, mamma, to take me to see one, and you said that you could not then, but that you would some time or other; and now the some time or other, which I thought never would arrive, has come to-day. I saw the letters, or the types, all in their square divisions in their cases, which lay sloping within reach of the compositor, who, with his composing stick in his hand, picked out the letters, and placed them in the form. Then another man inked their faces, with a black puff-ball, and afterwards the wet paper was pressed down on them. I knew and understood almost everything he was going to do, mamma, from recollecting the description. This was very pleasant. There was one thing, though, which I had mistaken; when I took up one of the types, I saw that the letter stands out from the face of the metal, it projects: now I had always fancied that the letters were hollowed out, cut into the types, as the letters for...
