A400M Wake Flow Studies Based on RANS CFD Methods on Hybrid Meshes, 2006 Knowledge of flow conditions in the vicinity of the aft section of military transport aircraft is crucial to ensure the safe and precise deployment of personnel and material. CFD methods used by Airbus and DLR allow valuable predictions of these conditions, taking into account the influence of flow deflectors, sponsons, open cargo hold doors/ramps, as well as propulsion slip-streams. With the requirement of precisely delivering personnel and/or equipment into an area of limited size, while guaranteeing safe conditions for the airframe (as well as paratroops/dropped equipment), military transport aircraft pose unique challenges to aerodynamics. Among them: Guaranteeing the safety of parachutists, whose near aircraft trajectory is significantly influenced by the aircraft wake shedding substantial vorticity (the safe separation problem); and providing safe operational conditions within the aircraft, while open doors strongly influence the internal air flow. Within this study, the hybrid Reynolds-averaged Navier-Stokes (RANS) multigrid flow-solver TAU, developed by the German research centre DLR, is used to assess the possibility of providing CFD support to such complex flow conditions as those occurring in the A400M military transport programme context.

Strategic lift Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Defence Committee, 2007-07-05 The Ministry of Defence needs the capability to transport personnel, equipment and stores from the UK to operational theatres across the globe. This capability, known as Strategic Lift, can be delivered by sea, land or air, and its annual cost to the MoD is almost £800 million a year. The Committee's report examines the progress of the MoD in delivering the Strategic Lift requirements set out in the Strategic Defence Review and whether these requirements need to be revisited given the experience of the operations in Afghanistan and Iraq. Findings include that good progress has been made in improving strategic sea-lift, particularly in relation to Ro-Ro ships and the acquisition of Landing Platform Dock (Auxiliary) vessels. However, strategic air-lift is a particular concern given the age of many of the aircraft, and the report looks at the progress of two major equipment programmes designed to deliver new transport aircraft (the A400M transport aircraft) and new tanker aircraft (the Future Strategic Tanker Aircraft).

ICAF 2009, Bridging the Gap between Theory and Operational Practice M. Bos,2009-05-24 The 31st Conference and the 25th Symposium of the International Committee on Aeronautical Fatigue will be hosted in Rotterdam, The Netherlands, by the National Aerospace Laboratory NLR, under the auspices of the Netherlands Association of Aeronautical Engineers NVvL, the Technical University of Delft and Stork Fokker AESP B.V. These Proceedings will consist of reviews of aeronautical fatigue activities presented by the national delegates of the 14 member nations of ICAF. It will also contain specialist papers presented by international authors with design, manufacturing, airworthiness regulations, operations and research backgrounds. The papers will be based on the theme "Bridging the gap between theory and operational practice".

The Major Projects Report 2012 Great Britain: National Audit Office,2013-01-10 In respect of its largest defence projects there are early signs that the Ministry of Defence has begun to make realistic trade-offs between cost, time, technical requirements and the amount of equipment to be purchased. Nevertheless, the continuing variances to cost and time show the MOD needs to do consistently better. This report, which gives a progress review of the 16 largest defence projects, shows that in the last year there has been a total forecast slippage of 139 months and increase in costs of £468 million. This means that, since the projects were approved, costs have increased by £6.6 billion (around 12 per cent more than the planned cost) and the projects have been delayed by 468 months, taking almost a third longer than originally expected. It would be unrealistic to expect MOD and industry to identify every risk at the start of technically challenging projects. However, the continuing problems indicate that MOD has more to learn from historic. The MOD is accepting the capability risk and some wider costs resulting from these project delays and is having to make difficult decisions about long-term capabilities. The MOD has made a significant investment in new and upgraded helicopters to address the shortfall identified in the NAO's 2004 report. The MOD has also spent £787 million on air transport and air-to-air refuelling aircraft to support current operations and address capability gaps, such as those caused by the previously reported delays to the A400M transport aircraft. However, capability gaps remain

New Results in Numerical and Experimental Fluid Mechanics III Siegfried Wagner,Ulrich Rist,Hans-Joachim Heinemann,Reinhard Hilbig,2002-02-26 This volume contains the papers of a German symposium dealing with research and project work in numerical and experimental aerodynamics and fluidmechanics for aerospace and other applications. It gives a broad overview over the ongoing work in this field in Germany.

Designing and Managing Successful International Joint Development Programs Gregory Sanders,Samantha Cohen,2017-02-20 This study compares the best practices of international joint development and domestic development programs through case-study analysis to identify the key variables that contribute to a program's eventual success or failure and to understand the elements that are crucial to managing these programs.

Computer Simulation of Paratrooper Deployment by Static Line from A400M. ,2006 A computer simulation with the capability to predict paratrooper deployment is presented. The deployment process is split into three phases, which are analyzed using different theoretical approaches. A finite-element approach is used to simulate the bowing of the parachute under the aerodynamic loads, which occurs during extraction from the deployment bag. Canopy inflation is modeled by the semiempirical Pflanz-Ludtke method. The results obtained agree well with photographic and video data of actual paratroop jumps. To model deployment within the non-uniform flow field around the A400M, a methodology that makes use of data from wind tunnel tests and CFD calculations is proposed. The corresponding simulations are used to analyze the risk of crossover -- a potentially lethal condition, where paratroopers are drawn towards the centerline behind the aircraft.

Exploding the Myth? Derek Braddon,2014-02-25 From a cold war peak of some $1000 billion per annum, world military expenditure has declined by about 40% since 1990, reaching its lowest level for thirty years. With such significant decline in global public expenditure commitments to the defence sector, a substantial and lasting peace dividend was anticipated. Most governments believed that market forces, left more or less to their own devices, would deal effectively with this major exogenous shock and generate sufficient new economic activity to allow increased public expenditure on health, education and welfare. The approach of this book is to challenge the fundamental but flawed belief that a substantial and lasting peace dividend could be secured through market solution alone. The principal assertion is that market adjustment by itself cannot deliver such a dividend. The book focuses on the major aspects of the economic, business and security consequences of post Cold War defence expenditure reduction. Key problems obstructing optimal market response are identified and possible remedial action by government and others is considered.

Defence equipment 2010 Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Defence Committee, 2010-03-04 The ability of the Defence Equipment and Support organisation within the Ministry of Defence (MoD) to deliver the equipment programme is overshadowed by the existence of a funding gap which the NAO estimates could be as much as £36 billion over the next ten years. Both the National Audit Office Major Projects Report 2009 (HC 85-I, session 2009-10, ISBN 9780102963342) and Bernard Gray's Review of Acquisition for the MoD have confirmed that the MoD's ten year equipment programme is unaffordable. Furthermore the MoD's practice of delaying projects so as to reduce costs in the early years of a programme is adding to overall procurement costs and so further increases the funding gap. The MoD has apparently made no attempt to calculate the full extent of the costs of delays and it has taken decisions to delay projects without understanding the full implications of those decisions. The report examines: progress on the many key programmes; defence research spending (declining from £540 million in 2007-08 to £471 million in 2009-10 and will decrease further in 2010-11 to £439 million); the response to and implementation of the Gray report; balancing the equipment programme and the use of regular Strategic Defence Reviews to maintain an up-to-date strategic context for the equipment programme; clarifying roles and accountabilities, including better leadership and decision-making; injecting key skills and tools into DE&S.
