Njinga de Ndongo y Matamba Ekiuwa Aire ,2023-08-25 Njinga de Ndongo y Matamba es la historia real de una niña que estuvo a punto de morir al nacer, pero que desafió todos los pronósticos y se convirtió en reina de dos reinos. Venerada por su sabiduría, valor y fuerza, Njinga se convirtió en una de las figuras políticas más dominantes de Angola en el siglo XVII. Este libro infantil, profusamente ilustrado, relata los desafíos a los que se enfrentó desde el día en que nació. Njinga tuvo que superar los celos de su hermano, la pérdida de su padre y la invasión de los portugueses en una época de grandes conflictos en África. Esta historia de esperanza y coraje demuestra que todas las jóvenes son capaces de hacer grandes cosas.

A mi aire Rafael Ciges Tapia,2019-09-30 En su condición de ejercicio literario, A mi aire es indudablemente una apuesta por unas formas completamente clasicistas, que recuerdan a la poesía didáctica de la época ilustrada. La temática oscila entre un intimismo que en ocasiones roza lo simbolista y onírico, y unas pinceladas de retrato social. Estas pinceladas huyen de todo convencionalismo y muestran la verdad que inquieta a Rafael Ciges Tapia sin pelos en la lengua. Madrid, Andalucía, en especial la Costa Levantina, son lugares comunes que el autor desmenuza con ojo clínico y desenfadado, tanto desde un pasado que se percibe con nostalgia como desde un presente analizado con un sarcasmo cido. Además, el bosque junto a las zonas litorales, repetidamente referido en el poemario como la floresta, sirve al autor para desarrollar su particular locus amoenus. Más que una autobiografía, tienes en tus manos un puñado en la mesa nacido del estomago de alguien con el impulso, tan humano y tan innato, de rebelarse contra el absurdo, del que tantos pensadores hablaron. Está a punto de embarcarte en esta estancia de tránsito interior. Despeja la incógnita y permite a Rafael Ciges Tapia que su rbrica incisiva y propia te hable de sí mismo. Al final cerrarás este libro sin posibilidad alguna de opinar indiferente. Rafael Ciges Tapia, nació en Madrid el 10 de julio de 1952. Durante treinta y cinco años desempeñó las funciones de técnico de filmación y producción de programas en televisión española. Es sobrino nieto de José Martínez Ruiz (Azorín), escritor. Nieto de Manuel Ciges Aparicio; escritor, periodista y político. Sobrino del actor Luis Ciges. Es autor del libro de rimas Sentimientos, Alazaras y otras Zarandajas.

The Other 'Aire Corey Taylor,2009-04 What if you had everything as a child and life seemed perfect.Your family has money; in fact you live in one of the biggest houses on the block. Now imagine you are suddenly thrust into a life of poverty and lack. Undoubtedly, middle class and poor people have heard a similar story like this or lived this experience first hand. Most have dreamed of their lives somehow magically ending in a Rags to Riches type story. However, far too often people dreams become crush by the weight of realistic living and soon they give up. If this sounds like you or someone you know then it is time to stop allowing your dreams to be crushed. The Other 'Aire provides a fresh and new perspective on the class system of society. Prepare for your life and finances to be transformed by The Other 'Aire.

Colombia from the Air Gustavo Wilches-Chaux,1993 Seen from above, from the sky, a country's geography looks like it really is: a huge living individual organism that has nothing to do with a mound of amorphous geography. Rivers that run like veins over valleys and mountians are a sight of majestic vitality; mountain chains as gigantic arms emerging from thick jungles and forests, extended through the land as vitaloxigen suppliers. This is Colombia seen from the air An hallucinating tour through the landscape of a country where one can breathe, touch and see exuberance, where the shiny silver rivers of the Caribbean plains glow while the high-tide of the deep Pacific Coast announces the arrival of whales to the continent. A paradise where the coffee growing area spreads out like aninmense quilt, sewn in green over the mountains, and moors host lakes of multi-coloured waters and unique species. Colombia from the air is the perfect book to cherish and be dazzled by the irresistible beauty that comes from the earth and the sea, fading in the horizon.

The Role of Aire, miRNAs and Cell-Cell Interactions on Thymic Architecture and Induction of Tolerance Geraldo Aleixo Passos,Daniella Areas Mendes-da-Cruz,Ernna Hrida Oliveira,2016-02-03 The focus of this eBook is to bring new insights into central immune tolerance. To fulfill that, much has been discussed about the master in the regulation of tolerance, the autoimmune regulator (Aire) gene the main thymus cell type that expresses this gene, the medullary thymic epithelial cells (mTECs). It includes one editorial and 12 other excellent contributions in the format of mini reviews or original research papers covering one or more of these aspects: promiscuous gene expression (PGE), epigenetics, miRNAs, association of the Aire gene and miRNAs, thymocyte-TEC interaction, coxsackievirus and type 1 diabetes, exosomes in the thymus, thymic crosstalk, thymic B cells, T cell development, chemokines and migration of T cells, miRNAs and the thymic atrophy, cell-cell interactions, and thymus ontogeny. Authors raised hypothesis, discuss concepts, and show open questions. The remaining important issues to resolve questions within the central tolerance research are briefly discussed below. The first mini review is authored by Olga Ucar and Kristin Rattay. They focused on the posttranscriptional control of PGE by miRNAs as well as epigenetic control involving DNA methylation, histone modifications, and topology of chromosomes. These processes represent additional factors to be explored and that might regulate the expression of Aire-independent tissue restricted antigens (TRAs), which are implicated in the central tolerance. Are the Eph/ephrins important for thymocyte-TEC interaction? This issue was reviewed by Javier Garcia-Ceca and cols. The maturation of thymocytes is depending on their interaction with TECs within the thymus. Authors argue the importance of Ephs and ephrins on the intrathymic maturation of both thymic epithelial microenvironment and thymocyte maturation and on the recruitment of lymphoid progenitors into the thymus. Another stimulating mini review is authored by Hrida Michaux and cols in which they discuss the hypothesis that infection by coxsackievirus B4 (CV-B4) could be associated with etiopathogenesis of type 1 diabetes mellitus (T1D). Authors consider that besides their tropism to the pancreatic beta cells, CV-B4 could also involve the thymus. Once within this organ the virus might somehow perturbs central tolerance to the insulin family triggering thus autoimmune T1D. Our group contributed with a mini review focusing on cell-cell interactions within the thymus involving TECs and thymocytes and the role of the Aire gene on the induction of central tolerance throughout the modulation of TRA expression in mTECs. In addition, we discuss the recent evidence that Aire also regulate the expression of miRNAs in these cells. On its turn, the Aire-dependent miRNAs might exert control over TRAs. We raise issues that besides the transcriptional control exerted by Aire, PGE could also be being controlled through posttranscriptional mechanism involving miRNAs. A very pertinent question raised by Gabriel Skogberg and cols is on the role of exosomes on TRA presentation by TECs to thymocytes and its implication in the thymocyte selection. Exosomes may be liberated by TECs to the extracellular milieu and transport TRAs as well as MHC molecules, establishing intercellular communication to enhance antigen presentation to developing thymocytes. Authors discuss how intercellular communication via exosomes within the thymus could have consequences on TRA presentation and finally on central tolerance. The thymic crosstalk, i.e., the reciprocal control by the close contact between TECs and thymocytes, which influences the differentiation of both types of cells was elegantly reviewed by Noella Lopes and cols. Authors discuss the role of dendritic cells (DCs) subsets in the process of deletion of autoreactive T cells and the generation of natural Tregs and raise questions how hematopoietic cells may control the organization of the thymic medulla. Thymus is an organ composed of different cell types including TECs, DCs, macrophages among other cell types, and of course thymocytes. Recently, researchers have identified an unexpected cell type formed by B cells, which may be originated from intrathymic B lymphopoiesis or immigration from the periphery. Tomoyoshi Yamano and cols contributed with a mini review discussing the role of thymic B cells expressing MHC-II, CD80, and Aire, in the crosstalk with CD4 single positive cells. Authors raise questions how these cells might play a role as antigen presenting cells in an unpredicted way within the thymus. The regulation of T cell development is apparently well resolved; however, several unsolved questions remain. This important aspect is represented in this research topic through the mini review by Iris Caramalho and cols.

AUTHORS SHOW NEW QUESTIONS ON THE BEGINNING OF TREG LINEAGE COMMITMENT, THEIR SPATIAL LOCALIZATION WITHIN THE HUMAN THYMUS AND THEIR MOLECULAR COMPONENTS. CELL MIGRATION WITHIN THE THYMUS IS CRUCIAL FOR THE CENTRAL TOLERANCE. DEVELOPING THYMOCYTES MIGRATE THROUGHOUT THE THYMUS BEING EXPOSED INITIALLY TO THE CORTEX AND THEN TO THE THYMIC MEDULLA WERE THEY RESPECTIVELY UNDERGO POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE SELECTION. CHEMOKINES REPRESENT KEY REGULATORS FOR THYMOCYTE MIGRATION. ZICHENG HU AND COLS ARGUE THE ROLE OF CHEMOKINES IN THE THYMIC CELL MIGRATION AND INDUCTION OF CENTRAL TOLERANCE. THYMIC ATROPHY DURING SENESCENCE IS WIDELY RECOGNIZED; HOWEVER, POORLY UNDERSTOOD. IN ADDITION TO THE ATROPHY DUE TO SENESCENCE, THYMUS INVOLUTES IN RESPONSE TO A VARIETY OF STIMULI INCLUDING MICROBIAL INFECTIONS. THE MOUSE MODEL OF TRYPANOSOMA CRUZI INFECTION CORRESPONDS TO AN ADEQUATE MOUSE MODEL TO ACCESS THIS QUESTION. LEANDRA LINHARES-LACERDA AND COLS SHOW RESULTS ON THE ROLE OF miRNAs ON REGULATION OF CHEMOTAXIS, WHICH CONTRIBUTE TO A BETTER UNDERSTANDING, WHILE INCITES NEW ISSUES, OF THYMIC INVOLUTION. CELLULARITY OF mTECs IS PIVOTAL FOR CELL-CELL INTERACTIONS WITHIN THE THYMUS, WHICH IS REQUIRED FOR CENTRAL TOLERANCE. TAISHIN AKIYAMA AND COLS ARGUE THE ROLE OF CYTOKINES ON CELLULARITY OF mTECs FOCUSING INTO THE MOLECULAR BASIS OF CELL-CELL INTERACTIONS OPENING PERSPECTIVE ON THE USE OF MATHEMATICAL MODELS FOR UNDERSTANDING THESE PROCESSES. THYMUS MORPHOGENESIS IS A CENTRAL POINT WITH MANY OPEN QUESTIONS. THE MINI REVIEW AUTHORED BY ARNON DIAS JURBERG AND COLS ADDRESSES THE ROLE OF THE LARGE SUPERFAMILY OF TGF-BETA/BONE MORPHOGENETIC PROTEIN LIGANDS IN THE THYMUS MORPHOGENESIS AND IN T CELL DIFFERENTIATION. THIS eBook PROVIDES AN INTERNATIONAL AND UPDATED INSIGHT INTO THE LATEST DEVELOPMENTS AND OPEN QUESTIONS ON THE CELLULAR AND MOLECULAR BASES OF CENTRAL TOLERANCE INDUCTION.
