Whaleback Ships and the American Steel Barge Company C. Roger Pellett, 2018-05-14 The whaleback ship reflected the experiences of its inventor, Captain Alexander McDougall, who decided in the 1880s that he could build an improved and easily towed barge cheaply by using the relatively unskilled labor force available in his adopted hometown of Duluth, Minnesota. Captain McDougall's dream resulted in the creation of the American Steel Barge Company. From 1888 to 1898, the American Steel Barge Company built and operated a fleet of forty-four barges and steamships on the Great Lakes and in international trade. These new ships were considered revolutionary by some and nautical curiosities by others. Built from what was then a high tech material (steel) and powered by state-of-the-art steam machinery, their creation in the remote north was a sign of industrial accomplishment. In Whaleback Ships and the American Steel Barge Company, Roger C. Pellett explains that the construction of these ships and the industrial infrastructure required to build them was financed by a syndicate that included some of the major players active in the Golden Age of American capitalism. The American Steel Barge Company operated profitably from 1889 through 1892, each year adding new vessels to its growing fleet. By 1893, it had run out of cash. The cash crisis worsened with the onset of the Panic of 1893, which plunged the country into a depression that mostly halted the ship-building industry. Only one shareholder, John D. Rockefeller, was willing and able to invest in the company to keep it afloat, and by doing so he gained control. When prosperity returned in 1896, the interest in huge iron ore deposits on the Mesabe Range required larger, more efficient vessels. In an attempt to meet this need, the company built another vessel that incorporated many whaleback features but included a conventional Great Lakes steamship bow. Although this new steamship compared favorably with vessels of conventional design, it was the last vessel of whaleback design to be built. Whaleback Ships and the American Steel Barge Company objectively examines the design of these ships using the original design drawings, notes the successes and failures of the company's business strategy, and highlights the men at the operating level that attempted to make this strategy work. Readers interested in the maritime history of the Great Lakes and the industries that developed around them will find this book fascinating.

Here Comes the Garbage Barge! Jonah Winter, 2010-02-09 This New York Times Best Illustrated Book is a mostly true and completely stinky story that is sure to make you say, "Pee-yew!" Teaching environmental awareness has become a national priority, and this hilarious book (subtly) drives home the message that we can't produce unlimited trash without consequences. Before everyone recycled . . . There was a town that had 3,168 tons of garbage and nowhere to put it. What did they do? Enter the Garbage Barge! Amazing art built out of junk, toys, and found objects by Red Nose Studio makes this the perfect book for Earth Day or any day, and photos on the back side of the jacket show how the art was created. Here Comes the Garbage Barge was a New York Times Best Illustrated book of 2010, a Huffington Post Best Picture Book of the Year, and a School Library Journal Best Book of the Year. The Washington Post said, "Cautionary? Yes. Hilarious? You betcha!" and the New York Times Book Review raved, "[A] glorious visual treat."

Barge Notes Don Bell, 2016-05-20 Barge Notes is the journal of a tugboat deckhand's experiences during one navigation season over thirty years ago on the Yukon River. Alaska, known for its pristine but wild landscape and severe climate conditions, presented challenges to the hardy individuals willing to work on these barges. These jobs offered adventure with a considerable element of danger at times but also much responsibility to those willing to make these trips providing building materials, construction equipment, fuel, household appliances and other necessities to the Alaskans living on the river. This book is taken from the author's journal and describes daily activities as they happened. The author, Don Bell, wrote down what happened every day on whatever was available at the time - pieces of paper or cardboard found on deck, and sometimes brief reminders to himself on the palm of his hand when paper was not available. He wrote in a notebook when off duty in his bunk, saving all his notes and notebooks in a large duffle bag. All these entries were then transferred during the winter to several permanent notebooks. The daily writings describe the adventure and hazards of that time on a wild river system which introduced new risks and surprises every day. The author describes his life as a deckhand in these experiences, the funny and sometimes not-so-funny perils of everyday life. Underlying these activities is his satisfaction of delivering cargo to the native people he learned to appreciate and his portrayal of the beauty of the wilderness in Alaska which became his home.
