Tillie's Place Gina Beth Clark,2010-06-08 TILLIE'S PLACE The railroads would never have been built if the workers had not been fed. This was wild country and west of Omaha, Nebraska, the men were forced to live off the land. Many times going with out a meal if the cook did not find any game that day. The railroads soon learned that it would also be necessary for them to feed their passengers. That was when the Northern Pacific and other railroads began to look for places along their routes to place restaurants. One of those places was in a little town at the end of the line west of Omaha. It happened when a pretty, petite woman became stranded in Longhorn, and had no where to go ,that Frank, the fireman on the Northern Pacific railroad, gave his boss the information that he knew of someone who needed to work. That is how Tillie found herself the proprietess of an establishment that not only was to feed the passengers going through to California, but she was to help Frank in solving the many mysterious deaths that occurred along the rail line. Her food was so good ,that it was well remembered as Tillie's Place and lived in the hearts of many men long after diners were finally added to the passenger trains.

Deported Americans Beth C. Caldwell,2019-02-28 When Gina was deported to Tijuana, Mexico, in 2011, she left behind her parents, siblings, and children, all of whom are U.S. citizens. Despite having once had a green card, Gina was removed from the only country she had ever known. In Deported Americans legal scholar and former public defender Beth C. Caldwell tells Gina's story alongside those of dozens of other Dreamers, who are among the hundreds of thousands who have been deported to Mexico in recent years. Many of them had lawful status, held green cards, or served in the U.S. military. Now, they have been banished, many with no hope of lawfully returning. Having interviewed over one hundred deportees and their families, Caldwell traces deportation's long-term consequences—such as depression, drug use, and homelessness—on both sides of the border. Showing how U.S. deportation law systematically fails to protect the rights of immigrants and their families, Caldwell challenges traditional notions of what it means to be an American and recommends legislative and judicial reforms to mitigate the injustices suffered by the millions of U.S. citizens affected by deportation.

The Artifacts Guy McDonald,2008-03-03 The “smoking gun” of the UFO enigma—physical proof—has, and always will be the criterion for belief in extraterrestrial life. If physical proof were eventually made public, mass hysteria would probably follow, because all we held sacred about our human origins would now be suspect. Secular and theological history, as we know it, would have to be rewritten. This is the premise of my novel: events that could occur should we learn that we are not alone in this universe. The characters are drawn from real people. Places and events come from researched material. Time lines and certain scenes use the author's personal experiences dealing with the enigma. Credibility comes from my military background, a member/researcher with the National Investigative Committee on Aerial Phenomena, (NICAP), and the Mutual UFO Network (MUFON). A scene in The Artifacts is based on my personal experience with a military cover-up.
