Censers and Incense of Mexico and Central America Walter Hough, 1912

A Golden Censer. [An Exposition of the Book of Revelation.] Censer, 1870

Holy Smoke Beate Fricke, 2023-12-20 Draws on religious art from four continents to investigate the materiality of the sacred. Burning incense has been a widespread religious practice throughout history and remains so today. The censer and its fragrant, wafting smoke are a basic material exchange between humans and gods and can be found across historical periods, religions, and cultures. Surprisingly, however, little scholarly attention has been given to censers and the rituals they facilitate. Holy Smoke: Censers Across Cultures investigates the practice of incense--the use of material objects to communicate with the divine--in religious contexts. The book considers the material fabrication of censers themselves, as well as the role of incense within religious ceremonies. Centering the censer not only places the object in a constellation of other religious artifacts, but also relocates rituals long relegated to the margins of religion, art, and ritual. This broad, comparative study will interest scholars in the fields of art history, archaeology, cultural history, anthropology, religious studies, and performance studies.

The Golden Censer the Duties of To-Day, the Hopes of the Future John McGovern,2017-06-22 Then methought the air grew denser, perfumed from an unseen censer, Swung by seraphim whose foot-falls tinkled on the tufted floor. -Edgar Poe. golden censer swings in the Temple of Life, making holy its halls and grateful its corridors. This fountain of our well-being is Duty. There is little true pleasure in the world which does not flow, either directly or remotely, from its depths. It shall be the object of this volume to point out and name a few of the balms which burn in this Unseen Censer-a few of the lines of action which render our memories sweet and forever pleasant if they be wrapt in such perfume. THE PALACE OF THE SOUL. When the incense of a man's good actions spreads through the palace of the soul, the powers that wait on noble deeds light up the edifice with radiance brought from other worlds. In the eye of a good man-in the window of the palace of his soul-we behold an occupant who fears no duty. We are fascinated, and gather about, anxious to peer in upon the fortunate possessor. Therein lies the happiness and the force of good example. But let the Censer burn low, and flicker in final sickliness; the great bell called Conscience, hanging in the dome, strikes an alarm that rocks the building. How oft the solemn tocsin sounds! It drives us to our duty! Let us be thankful its clangor is so harsh! THE FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY, the man whose heart was torn each time his soldiers' feet did bleed-the man who stood like a rock between the despot and the down-trodden-that man, at the end of the career which glorified him, and which, with reflected glory will light the annals of all coming centuries-that kind, good man, George Washington, could not discern the separating line between Duty and human happiness. The consideration that human happiness and moral duty, he said, are inseparately connected, will always continue to prompt me to promote the progress of the one by inculcating the practice of the other. LET US KEEP THE GOLDEN CENSER BURNING with the frankincense of our highest endeavors. Let us, as Theodore Parker once said, do our duty in our shop, or our kitchen, the market, the street, the office, the school, the home, just as faithfully as if we stood in the front rank of some great battle, and we knew that victory for mankind depended on our bravery, strength, and skill. When we do that, the humblest of us will be serving in that great army which achieves the welfare of the world. THE SOLDIER GOES FORTH with his loins girded, hoping to conquer in the hard battles of life. Let the incense of Duty cling to his garments and keep him clean from selfish contagion. How lovely the picture of that old man of Goldsmith's time, swinging the Golden Censer before the hearts that throbbed in unison with him: He watched and wept, he prayed and felt for all; And as a bird each fond endearment tries, To tempt her new-fledged offspring to the skies, He tried each art, reproved each dull delay, Allured to brighter worlds, and led the way. Our duty was created with us. It is a pleasure to live....

The Golden Censer John McGovern, 2019-12-24 The Golden Censer is a philosophical book by the author John McGovern famed for the book, Worlds without End. McGovern makes the point that life is to be extracted of its rich treasure before it taken away in time. He surmises that, A golden censer swings in the Temple of Life, making holy its halls and grateful its corridors. This fountain of our well-being is Duty. There is little true pleasure in the world which does not flow, either directly or remotely, from its depths. It shall be the object of this volume to point out and name a few of the balms which burn in this Unseen Censer—a few of the lines of action which render our memories sweet and forever pleasant if they be wrapt in such perfume.

Prelude to Power Jack Richard Censer, 2019-12-01
Originally published in 1976. This investigation focuses on the ideology of the radical press during the French Revolution. Events, individuals, and institutions were important, but they were reported in such a manner as to make them subordinate to ideas. In their descriptions of the people and institutions of the Revolution, radicals drew heavily on the stereotypes provided by their ideology. The author analyzes the radicals of 1789 to 1791 with respect to collective interests and concerns. For these radicals, ideology governed from 1789 through 1791. And, insofar as events had any impact on the radicals, occurrences of 1790 were important because they coincided with radical shifts in opinion. Subsequent and more famous events came too late to have much impact on radical views. The author reveals that Jacobin thought of 1792 and 1793 had definite origins dating from 1789. The similarity between radical thought and the ideology of Robespierre proves that Jacobinism was not a hasty doctrine of the moment but the direct product of positions assumed since 1789.

Excerpt from A Censer Sublime in his eternal power, God willed a world, and it was done; He placed it 'mid the circling spheres, And marked the orbit it must run. Its future glory moved the heavens The stars of morning raised a song, And all the sons of God with joy The notes of triumph bore along. And yet 'twas but a formless void, This earth to be so fair and grand, And through the countless years must wait The shaping of the Master's hand. And watching, silent, patient, calm, He sees the creeping ages pass. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
