CHEW-CHEW CHINQUAPIN PARK IRENE MCCULLUM-HINES,2014-05 This is a story where the animals come to life. Sharrell, Akil and Aminah would play with a squirrel whose name was Chew-Chew. They would go over to their grandmother's house and play with him while sitting on the steps. One day Chew-Chew wanted the children to follow him home to Chinquapin Park so he could show them where he lived and played. On the journey through Chinquapin Park they meet up with Chew-Chew's friends, Miss. Bird, Mr. Rabbit, Mr. Snake and Mr. Deer.

The Chinquapin Tree Jerry Kimble Holcomb,1998 Fearing they will be sent from a loving foster home back to their abusive mother, three children hide out in a secluded spot on Oregon's coast, trying to find food and shelter.

Chinquapin - the Way We Lived Kenan Maready,2014-12-11 Memories of the author of the way his family and neighbors lived in eastern rural North Carolina in the 1930's and 1940's during the Great Depression and World War II. The book recalls some humorous events in their lives but it also reveals a shade of poverty and hardship which undoubtedly strengthened their character. They are better people for having lived through it.

Chinquapin, All It's Cracked Up to Be! Kenan Maready,2015-05-05 This book tells the story of Kerry Lestor Moore, called Kerry Les, a young boy growing up in the small town of Chinquapin in the 1930's and 1940's. Kerry Les was somewhat of a mischievous boy, always in trouble, and with an inclination to tell untruths when he felt it was necessary to protect himself from punishment. Kerry Les, although two years older, was in the same grade as Kenan Maready at Chinquapin School. Readers of the author's first book, Chinquapin-The Way We Lived, will see that this book gives another point of view to some of the events in that book. Fortunately for Kerry Les he gives up most of his bad habits as he matures. In the end, we can see that he's very likely to be a success in his adult life.

Chinquapin Summers Curtis McLeod,2017-07-26 Chinquapin Summers are the childhood memories of Curtis McLeod. He started writing his memoirs over 13 years ago and with the help of my sister, Kathy who designed his cover art, had them spiral bound to give to family and friends. Our wish is to make his stories available to everyone. Our dad sadly passed away November 9, 2016 at the age of 90 and his memories are his legacy to us and everyone interested in a little East Texas history. We have not altered his writing or format in any way; his words and style are exactly the way he first put them down on paper. His coming of age tales will take you on an amazing and nostalgic journey, from the adventures in Mr. Blizzard's watermelon patch, to the twister that destroyed the small town of Rodessa, La. We hope you enjoy these true stories and history as much as we have.

CHINQUAPIN the Last Great Hope S. M. Williams,2017-09-09 A secret so well kept that only a handful of people ever knew of its existence. A secret so powerful that it would change the outcome of the Civil War and bring victory to the struggling Confederacy. A secret entrusted to a Confederate spy, code name: Chinquapin; a spy who is faced with the greatest challenge of her life... surviving the Siege of Atlanta and delivering the 'last hope' to Richmond. Although a delicate flower of Southern womanhood, she is more than a Scarlet O'Hara. She is Chinquapin whose wit and determination keeps her one step ahead of capture. Whose fierce loyalty to the Southern Cause clashes with her growing attraction to a Union Major who is committed to unraveling the secret she carries.

Chinquapin Road Bonnie N Turner,2022-02-21 March 22nd 1865, and today is Joshua Sutton's fifteenth birthday but so far all he has done is work. He is up in the hidden barn, on the northern side of the farm. In the stalls are two pregnant mares and Gray Stone, his father's beloved stallion. These animals will be the foundation of the Sutton Farm after the war is over. That is if they can keep them hidden just a little longer. Josh hears a sound coming from the storage room below, fearing a stray dog may be chewing on his father's saddle. It is the only thing that Lee Sutton has that belonged to his father, Major Sutton. On, his way down the ladder, Josh grabs the pitchfork before running to confront the four-legged intruder. It was not a dog but four Rebel deserters who had butchered the milk cow and had the hindquarter strapped the Bell the mule. Josh is ordered to saddle Gray Stone and the mule for he will be coming with them until the chance of Lee Sutton following them is gone. Josh knows his sisters are in the backyard with his mama, as he decided to lead, the kidnappers as far from here as possible, until he would someday bring the mule and stallion home. Thinking like a man reasoning the pregnant mares will be sacrificed in order to return Gray Stone and Bell safely home. He not once thought of himself, when he promised to never let his father's dream just die. So, his two-hundred-and-fifty-mile journey begins he looks back to see just the tops of the Chinquapin trees, as his eyes fill with tears. Josh was leaving here a crying boy, but he will return a man.
