Mercenary Captain and magician, Phillipe, of the Marauding Sea Wolves Company doesn't know whether to praise his luck or curse when he and his retreating people stumble across a derelict castle surrounded by thorns. With magic involved, there is no such thing as coincidence. Running from an evil magician only known as the Emperor, Phillipe and his people need a place to hide. What he doesn't need is a Princess, pampered, spoiled, and useless. If he wants the castle to hide and protect his people, he's going to have to wake the Princess inside. Once awake, Princess Roxana isn't what he expected, stubborn, proud, and hard working. Knowing nothing of the current world, Roxana is seeking answers to what has happened while she's been asleep. The people she knows have disappeared. New creatures called centaurs and minotaurs walk the lands. The answer appears to be this Emperor. Taking on evil magicians is her life's calling. She can't fall in love with a man who is avoiding her. Come spring, even if no one wants her to, she's going to take on this Emperor herself. That's a life she understands. Suicide mission. Maybe? The fate of the world and its magic is on the line. If she and Phillipe can let go of their pride and love, for once it is a good thing that Roxana was born a Princess.
