Electron Energy-Loss Spectroscopy in the Electron Microscope R.F. Egerton, 2013-03-09 to the Second Edition Since the first (1986) edition of this book, the numbers of installations, researchers, and research publications devoted to electron energy-loss spectroscopy (EELS) in the electron microscope have continued to expand. There has been a trend towards intermediate accelerating voltages and field-emission sources, both favorable to energy-loss spectroscopy, and several types of energy-filtering microscope are now available commercially. Data-acquisition hardware and software, based on personal computers, have become more convenient and user-friendly. Among university researchers, much thought has been given to the interpretation and utilization of near-edge fine structure. Most importantly, there have been many practical applications of EELS. This may reflect an increased awareness of the potentialities of the technique, but in many cases it is the result of skill and persistence on the part of the experimenters, often graduate students. To take account of these developments, the book has been extensively revised (over a period of two years) and more than a third of it rewritten. I have made various minor changes to the figures and added about 80 new ones. Except for a few small changes, the notation is the same as in the first edition, with all equations in SI units.

OPCS Classification of Interventions and Procedures, Version 4.5 (April 2009). Connecting for Health (Organization), 2009 The OPCS Classification of Interventions and Procedures Version 4.5 is to be used in the NHS from 1 April 2009. The Classification is an NHS Fundamental Information Standard developed and maintained by NHS Connecting for Health and used by health care providers and Strategic Health Authorities throughout the NHS. The OPCS-4 Classification system is now reviewed annually. This latest version continues the enhancement of the OPCS-4 Classification to reflect changes in clinical practice. The Classification supports various forms of data collection, such as Central Returns and Commissioning Data Sets, as well as other secondary uses of information essential to planning and improving patient care. The enhancements in OPCS-4.5 continue to reflect changes to clinical care in recent years and enables clinicians, in collaboration with clinical coders, to better describe interventions and procedures. The ability to provide improved clinical information continues to ensure the classification meets the needs of the Government's reform of NHS funding - Payment by Results (PbR). Included in this package are Volume I - Tabular List and Volume II - Alphabetical Index. This combined pack offers a saving against purchasing the two volumes separately. The Alphabetical Index is integral to the use of the classification when used in conjunction with the Tabular List (Volume I), which must be used as the primary coding tool. This version has been completed in collaboration with the Department of Health and the Information Centre for health and social care. This pack supersedes OPCS version 4.4, combined pack, ISBN: 9780113227792.
