The Hand Grenade Gordon L. Rottman,2015-02-20 Allowing the user to inflict damage on his opponent within throwing range without leaving cover, the portable, lethally efficient hand grenade is a ubiquitous weapon of modern warfare, and has now found its way into law-enforcement arsenals too. Featuring specially commissioned full-colour artwork and an array of revealing photographs of grenades in use and in close-up, this engaging study explores and assesses the origins, development, combat use, and lasting legacy of the formidable military hand grenade.

Grenade Range Management Using Lime for Metals Immobilization and Explosives Transformation Treatability Study ,2007 The Department of Defense operates hundreds of hand grenade ranges (HGRs) for training purposes. Live fire training is a necessary function to maintain mission readiness for our Nation's warfighters, but it creates a potential source zone for munitions constituents such as metals and explosives. Fragmentation grenades typically containing composition B within a steel shell casing constitute the majority of hand grenades used at fixed position ranges. Explosives have been detected in HGR soils at levels in the low parts per billion (microg/kg) up to percent levels. Two mechanisms with potential for offsite migration of metals and explosives from HGR soil are transport in surface water and subsurface transport in leachate or pore water. Simple, innovative, and cost-effective technologies are being developed that can break down munitions constituents quickly at the training sites and prevent residues from migrating to local surface water or ground water supplies. The application of hydrated lime to HGRs provides both a mechanism for metals immobilization and explosives transformation. The results from this treatability study indicate that the application of lime can be incorporated into range sustainability operations and the management practices for active HGRs.

The Routledge Dictionary of Modern American Slang and Unconventional English Tom Dalzell,2018-05-11 The Routledge Dictionary of Modern American Slang offers the ultimate record of modern, post WW2 American Slang. The 25,000 entries are accompanied by citations that authenticate the words as well as offer examples of usage from popular literature, newspapers, magazines, movies, television shows, musical lyrics, and Internet user groups. Etymology, cultural context, country of origin and the date the word was first used are also provided. In terms of content, the cultural transformations since 1945 are astounding. Television, computers, drugs, music, unpopular wars, youth movements, changing racial sensitivities and attitudes towards sex and sexuality are all substantial factors that have shaped culture and language. This new edition includes over 500 new headwords collected with citations from the last five years, a period of immense change in the English language, as well as revised existing entries with new dating and citations. No term is excluded on the grounds that it might be considered offensive as a racial, ethnic, religious, sexual or any kind of slur. This dictionary contains many entries and citations that will,

and should, offend. Rich, scholarly and informative, The Routledge Dictionary of Modern American Slang and Unconventional English is an indispensable resource for language researchers, lexicographers and translators.

Grenade Range Management Using Lime for Dual Role of Metals Immobilization and Explosives Transformation Treatability, 2006 The importance of live fire training for US forces cannot be overestimated. The success of our armed forces depends upon realistic training utilizing the actual weapons and munitions that will be used in theatre during strategic and tactical operations. However, a drawback of this type of realistic training is the potential contamination of firing ranges. Most munitions-contaminated soils found on training ranges contain a mixture of compounds. For hand grenade ranges (HGR), the prevalent munition used is the fragmentation grenade, typically composed of an iron shell and Composition B explosive material. Studies performed on ranges in both the United States and Canada have shown that there is a large degree of variability in munitions constituent type, concentration, size, and spatial distribution occurring on single ranges, as well as between different ranges. Contaminants present include explosive residue in the form of Composition B and Trinitrotoluene as well as metals such as zinc, iron, manganese, calcium, lead, chromium, copper, nickel, molybdenum, vanadium, and tin. The optimum treatment technology for successful remediation of distributed energetics and metals at training ranges should be inexpensive, easily applied in remote locations, effective on heterogeneous contaminant distributions, effective over large areas, effective on multiple compounds, be non-intrusive, to the extent possible, and able to be incorporated into normal range maintenance operations. Technologies currently available for the remediation of munitions-contaminated soil and groundwater do not meet these criteria. The objectives of this study were to evaluate and develop a cost effective management technology to control active grenade range contaminant mobility and promote on-site contaminant degradation.

Publications Combined: Marine Combat Training (MCT) Battalion Course Materials , To the Marines: Welcome to Golf Company and the next step in your journey to becoming part of the world's premier fighting force. Many have failed or never even attempted what you have accomplished thus far, take pride in that. However, your journey has just begun. At Marine Combat Training, we will train and educate you in the common combat skills necessary to operate within any environment. The basic skills you will learn were forged over two centuries of battles; they are timeless, and vital to yours and the Corps success, now and in the future. Our Combat Instructors will Lead, Teach, Mentor, and Guide every one of you, through a rigorous 29-day program of instruction. You will be taught by the most experienced, professional, and knowledgeable Staff Non-commissioned Officers and Non-commissioned Officers that the Marine Corps has to offer. These SNCO's and NCO's were hand-picked out of hundreds of applicants to come to the School of Infantry to be Combat Instructors. I highly encourage you to prepare your mind and body for this training, the knowledge you gain here will carry you throughout your Marine Corps career. During the training cycle, I expect you to commit yourself to your training and education by learning as much as you can from our Combat Instructors. Finally, when you graduate, I expect you to retain what you learned and uphold the time honored traditions of our Marine Corps. Remember that regardless of military Occupation Specialty, every Marine is a Rifleman first. Every Marine, regardless of his military occupation, is trained as a Rifleman. This concept has been around since the Marine Corps inception in 1775, when every man who volunteered was required to bring his own musket. In the early 1900s, as the Marine Corps grew and additional military occupations were created, the Commandant, General John A. Lejeune, ensured that every Marine, regardless of his Military Occupational Specialty (MOS), received marksmanship training. During the Korean War, the Marine Corps was the only service to create rifle companies entirely from cooks, drivers, and other non-infantry Marines. From this war, the proverbial saying, Every Marine a Rifleman was born. In the nineteen eighties, the Commandant, General Al Gray, recognized the need to train all Marines in more than just basic marksmanship, but in modern-day combat skills. The School of Infantry was assigned to conduct this training known as Common Skills because it is common to every Marine. These common skills allow every Marine, regardless of MOS, to act as Rifleman when called upon. MCT Battalion generates Marine Riflemen to possess a foundational understanding of, and their role in applying, the Marine Corps' warfighting ethos, core values, basic tenets of maneuver warfare, leadership responsibilities, mental, moral, and physical resiliency in order to contribute to the successful accomplishment of their unit's mission. New Rifleman Definition: A Marine Rifleman embodies the Marine Corps' warfighting ethos: offensively minded; lethal with their weapon mentally, morally, physically resilient; proficient in basic field craft; and possessing a foundational understanding of leadership and the basic tenets of maneuver warfare. SAS Ultimate Guide to Combat Robert Stirling,2012-04-20 I've written this book to help you – the soldier – kill the enemy when you get the chance and, most importantly, come back home in one piece. To achieve this aim I've covered combat training from boot camp up to the level required of a Special Forces soldier. And then gone on to add a few tricks of my own. I've done a bit of soldiering (Northern Ireland, SAS deployments, Bush Wars in Africa, life as a merc) and been in my fair share of fire-fights. I've only been wounded twice and learnt from both occasions. I'm going to use my experience to teach you to play the game. I'm not going to teach you how to survive in snowy mountains for a month with only one tea-bag or how to kill a room full of people with only a toothpick. There are plenty of books that do that already. This book will teach you how to fight and survive war in the 21st century from the tools of the trade, to avoiding getting shot or blown-up, from surviving an interrogation to defending a position. This is a book not for the faint hearted. But then neither is war.
