Francis Haar Francis Haar, 2001 This volume presents 80 of photographer Francis Haar's finest b&w photographs, including many not previously published. The images span his career from his early Hungarian studies in the 1930s, his views of Paris and Japan from pre-war to post-war years, portraits of his wife and of many distinguished artist friends, and his final period in Hawaii. Haar's own writings provide extensive autobiographical information and commentary on the photographs. Oversize: 9.75x11.5. Annotation copyrighted by Book News, Inc., Portland, OR.

Haar Wavelets Ülo Lepik, Helle Hein, 2014-01-09 This is the first book to present a systematic review of applications of the Haar wavelet method for solving Calculus and Structural Mechanics problems. Haar wavelet-based solutions for a wide range of problems, such as various differential and integral equations, fractional equations, optimal control theory, buckling, bending and vibrations of elastic beams are considered. Numerical examples demonstrating the efficiency and accuracy of the Haar method are provided for all solutions.

Nonlinear System Identification by Haar Wavelets Przemysław Sliwinski, 2012-10-12 In order to precisely model real-life systems or man-made devices, both nonlinear and dynamic properties need to be taken into account. The generic, black-box model based on Volterra and Wiener series is capable of representing fairly complicated nonlinear and dynamic interactions, however, the resulting identification algorithms are impractical, mainly due to their computational complexity. One of the alternatives offering fast identification algorithms is the block-oriented approach, in which systems of relatively simple structures are considered. The book provides nonparametric identification algorithms designed for such systems together with the description of their asymptotic and computational properties.

The Joys of Haar Measure Joe Diestel, Angela Spalsbury, 2014-04-23 From the earliest days of measure theory, invariant measures have held the interests of geometers and analysts alike, with the Haar measure playing an especially delightful role. The aim of this book is to present invariant measures on topological groups, progressing from special cases to the more general. Presenting existence proofs in special cases, such as compact metrizable groups, highlights how the added assumptions give insight into just what the Haar measure is like; tools from different aspects of analysis and/or combinatorics demonstrate the diverse views afforded the subject. After presenting the compact case, applications indicate how these tools can find use. The generalisation to locally compact groups is then presented and applied to show relations between metric and measure theoretic invariance. Steinlage's approach to the general problem of homogeneous action in the locally compact setting shows how Banach's approach and that of Cartan and Weil can be unified with good effect. Finally, the situation of a nonlocally compact Polish group is discussed briefly with the surprisingly unsettling consequences indicated. The book is accessible to graduate and advanced undergraduate students who have been exposed to a basic course in real variables, although the authors do review the development of the Lebesgue measure. It will be a stimulating reference for students and professors who use the Haar measure in their studies and research.

Haar Series and Linear Operators I. Novikov, E. Semenov, 2013-11-11 In 1909 Alfred Haar introduced into analysis a remarkable system which bears his name. The Haar system is a complete orthonormal system on $[0,1]$ and the Fourier-Haar series for arbitrary continuous function converges uniformly to this function. This volume is devoted to the investigation of the Haar system from the operator theory point of view. The main subjects treated are: classical results on unconditional convergence of the Haar series in modern presentation; Fourier-Haar coefficients; reproducibility; martingales; monotone bases in rearrangement invariant spaces; rearrangements and multipliers with respect to the Haar system; subspaces generated by subsequences of the Haar system; the criterion of equivalence of the Haar and Franklin systems. Audience: This book will be of interest to graduate students and researchers whose work involves functional analysis and operator theory.

HAAR CASCADES OBJECT RECOGNITION WITH TKINTER Vivian Siahaan, Rismon Hasiholan Sianipar, 2023-12-15 In this project, we explored a Python script designed for object recognition using Haar Cascades within a graphical user interface (GUI) built with the Tkinter library. The script was organized into multiple modules, each serving a distinct purpose. The core functionality was encapsulated within the `Form_Haar_Cascades` class, which defined a Tkinter window containing various widgets for specifying parameters and visualizing object detection results. The class utilized Haar Cascades for detecting facial features, such as eyes, noses, and mouths, in images. It also integrated noise generation features through the `Noise_Utils` class, enhancing the versatility of the object recognition application. A key aspect of the script was the integration of noise parameters, allowing users to introduce different types of noise (e.g., Gaussian, salt-and-pepper) to the input image before applying Haar Cascades. This feature was facilitated by the `Noise_Utils` class, which utilized NumPy and OpenCV for image manipulation. Additionally, the GUI offered flexibility by enabling users to adjust Haar Cascades parameters, such as the scale factor, minimum neighbors, and line width, through interactive widgets. The plotting capabilities of the application were extended using the `Plot_Utils` class, which created a separate window for visualizing the results of Haar Cascades object detection. This additional functionality enhanced the user experience by providing a dedicated space for exploring the outcomes of different object detection scenarios. The modular design of the script, with distinct classes for Haar Cascades, noise generation, and plotting, promoted code organization and maintainability. The main program, represented by the `Main_Program` class, orchestrated the integration of these components, configuring the layout of the main Tkinter window, handling event bindings, and managing the overall flow of the GUI application. Finally, the script was encapsulated in a conditional block that checked if the script was executed as the main program. If so, it instantiated the Tkinter root window, initialized the `Main_Program` class, and entered the Tkinter event loop to display the GUI. This ensured that the application could be run independently, launching the GUI for users to interact with and explore Haar Cascades object recognition with integrated noise features.

Spaces of Approximating Functions with Haar-like Conditions Kazuaki Kitahara, 2006-11-15 Tchebycheff (or Haar) and weak Tchebycheff spaces play a central role when considering problems of best approximation from finite dimensional spaces. The aim of this book is to introduce Haar-like spaces, which are Haar and weak Tchebycheff spaces under special conditions. It studies topics of subclasses of Haar-like spaces, that is, classes of Tchebycheff or weak Tchebycheff spaces, spaces of vector-valued monotone increasing or convex functions and spaces of step functions. The notion of Haar-like spaces provides a general point of view which includes the theories of approximation from the above spaces. The contents are largely new. Graduate students and researchers in approximation theory will be able to read this book with only basic knowledge of analysis, functional analysis and linear algebra.

Nietzsche and Metaphysics Michel Haar, 1996-01-01 Michel Haar assesses the overcoming of metaphysics urged by Nietzsche. Pointing out that Nietzsche's overcoming must be conceived as a task both critical and reconstructive, Haar shows how Nietzsche criticizes philosophical concepts as being traceable to a process of simplification and identification, thus subverting traditional categories and identities. Haar presents Nietzsche as an aesthetic stoic. Although opposed to any doctrinal tenet, Nietzsche rekindles a Stoic return to nature in the register of a creative and aesthetic decision. Necessity is no longer a single rational force permeating all beings. Instead he conceives of the will to power as a schematization of the natural chaos and refers Dionysos to an inspiring voice: the genius of the heart. Rejecting the Deleuzian essay of interpretation that unleashes the simulacra of an untamed imagination, Haar points out that Nietzsche's rejection of Kant is much less extreme than imagined in Deleuze's eccentric readings. Haar also shows that the rupture with Schopenhauer came very early in Nietzsche's itinerary although he accepted the idea of a social conditioning of science. Haar shows that two Apollonian sublimities are distinguished by Nietzsche: one generating idyll, epos, and mythic language; the other a compensatory illusion on the dramatic stage destined to dismiss the horror of an endlessly swelling ground. It is this monstrosity that a creative forgetfulness is destined to replace by seeking a place for the work of art amidst tragic joy.
