David's Promise Kathy Sykes Howell, Kathy Sykes, 2006 What would it be like to navigate this life under the shadow of a deadly disease? How would you cope, both physically and psychologically? Approximately 30,000 people in our country live with the devastating illness, cystic fibrosis, and one in twenty Caucasians are carriers of its gene. Many among us are affected by CF, but few really know much about it. David's Promise delivers an in-depth examination of a young man's life-long confrontation with cystic fibrosis. Through the fictional main character of David, the reader is given a deeply personal chance to experience love's ultimate triumph over illness. The story explores all the complexities of David's life, and as each layer unfolds, the reader begins to look beyond David's medical diagnosis and into his heart. The young man is a teacher with a pregnant wife and a whole slew of struggles, including the implications of genetic testing, the question of abortion, and denial of medical insurance coverage in this country. This novel does not pull any punches concerning the stark realities of cystic fibrosis, yet it was written to offer hope and understanding about an often hopeless and misunderstood disease.

The Leadership Illusion T. Hall, K. Janman, 2016-01-18 This book is about the leadership illusion; the habit of writers, researchers and leaders, when considering causes of success or failure, to focus mainly on the individual and often the context but rarely both. This book argues that context and individual are inextricably linked and we first must make sense of the context in which leaders operate.

OUT OF ORDER: The Self-Destruction Of A Mainline Denomination Powell Sykes, 2012-11-01 In 1927 American Presbyterians chose to stop listing and insisting upon the essential tenets of the Reformed faith; instead, they emphasized tolerance and essential action. Since then, historic, biblically based Christianity has been supplanted more and more by a different religion, dubbed Religious Liberalism by the author, within the largest Presbyterian denomination in the United States. This, coupled with decades of removing practical means of holding pastors accountable for any of their beliefs and much of their behavior, is leading to that denomination's demise in the early years of the 21st Century. The author combines historical overview and perspective with his own experiences as a pastor of Presbyterian churches in North Carolina to make his case.

Halfway to Hollywood: Diaries 1980--1988 Michael Palin, 2011-03-15 A Kirkus Reviews Best Nonfiction of 2011 title The second volume of Michael Palin's diaries covers the bulk of the 1980s, a decade in which the ties binding the Pythons loosened—they made their last film Monty Python's Meaning of Life in 1983. For Michael, writing and acting took over much of his life, culminating in his appearances in A Fish Called Wanda, in which he played the hapless, stuttering Ken, and won a BAFTA for Best Supporting Actor. Halfway to Hollywood follows Palin's torturous trail through seven movies and ends with his final preparations for the documentary that was to change his life—Around the World in 80 Days. During these years he co-wrote and acted in Terry Gilliam's Time Bandits as well as spearing in Gilliam's follow-up success Brazil. Palin co-produced, wrote and played the lead in The Missionary opposite Maggie Smith, who also appeared with him in A Private Function, written by Alan Bennett. In television the decade was memorable for East of Ipswich, inspired his links with Suffolk. Such was his fame in the US, he was enticed into once again hosting the enormously popular show Saturday Night Live. He filmed one of the BBC's Great Railway Journeys as well as becoming chairman of the pressure group Transport 2000. His life with Helen and the family remains a constant, as the children enter their teens. Palin's joy of writing is evident once more in Halfway to Hollywood as he demonstrates his continuing sense of wonder at the world in which he finds himself. A world of screens large and small.

Toxicology and Risk Assessment Anna M. Fan, George Alexeeff, Elaine Khan, 2015-03-04 The presence of chemicals in our environment is a subject of intense interest owing to the many potential adverse health effects to humans following exposure to these chemicals. The principles and practices of risk assessment are used to assess the associated health risks to provide a scientific and health basis for guidance or regulatory standards development and risk management decision making for public health protection. This book compiles, discusses, and presents cutting-edge research data and methodology in performing risk assessment of some major chemicals of concern in our environment. It also discusses the complexity of the scientific databases, the available and updated methodology, emerging issues, limitations in knowledge and methods, considerations of developmental and age sensitivities, use of defaults, case samples on results in risk assessment and risk management, and current and future perspectives. The editors are prominent in the field of environmental toxicology, risk assessment, and chemical regulations. This book will appeal to those interested in evaluating the human health effects of exposure to chemicals in the environment and the associated assessments and findings.

Costs of Illness Among Older Adults: An Analysis of Six Major Health Conditions with Significant Environmental Risk Factors George Van Houtven, Amanda Honeycutt, Boyd Gilman, Nancy McCall, Wanda W. Throneburg, 2008-08-31 This study estimates the cost burden associated with six major illnesses among Americans age 65 or older: chronic lung disease, ischemic heart disease, stroke, lung cancer, pneumonia, and gastrointestinal illness. These illnesses were selected because of their relatively high impact among older populations and because they include environmental exposures as a significant risk factor. A prevalence-based cost-of-illness approach was applied. Medical costs were estimated from Medicare claims data in 2000. Productivity losses were estimated through regression analyses of National Health Interview Survey data and using age-specific earnings and household production estimates. Estimated costs range from $0.5 billion (gastrointestinal illness) to almost $60 billion (ischemic heart disease). The combined costs of these conditions among the 65-or-older population in 2000 were almost $135 billion. A simple extrapolation of these cost estimates based on population growth and increases in average medical care prices since 2000 implies that the comparable costs in 2007 were more than $196 billion. With the expectation that these costs will continue to increase significantly as the population ages, priority should be given to prevention strategies such as environmental quality improvements.

The Right to Stay Home David Bacon, 2013-09-10 The story of the growing resistance of Mexican communities to the poverty that forces people to migrate to the United States. People across Mexico are being forced into migration, and while 11 percent of that country's population lives north of the US border, the decision to migrate is rarely voluntary. Free trade agreements and economic policies that exacerbate and reinforce extreme wealth disparities make it impossible for Mexicans to make a living at home. And yet when they migrate to the United States, they must grapple with criminalization, low wages, and exploitation. In The Right to Stay Home, journalist David Bacon tells the story of the growing resistance of Mexican communities. Bacon shows how immigrant communities are fighting back—envisioning a world in which migration isn't forced by poverty or environmental destruction and people are guaranteed the "right to stay home." This richly detailed and comprehensive portrait of immigration reveals how the interconnected web of labor, migration, and the global economy unites farmers, migrant workers, and union organizers across borders. In addition to incisive reporting, eleven narratives are included, giving readers the chance to hear the voices of activists themselves as they reflect on their experiences, analyze the complexities of their realities, and affirm their vision for a better world.

Little Man with a Big Dream Susan Sykes, 2021-08-17 Susan Sykes is a kind and respectful lady in her 50's. Who enjoy working with all people and like sharing the positive things! She went to school, pass all her classes, graduated from the 12th and went to college for child care. Her first job was cleaning the streets in different neighborhoods. This was a summer job for children but you had to be 15 or 16 years old. Back then you were given a learner's permit and your parent had to sign it and the school saying it was o.k. to work. She was able to help her mother, who was rising five (5) kids as a single mom. Susan was able to buy her own clothes, school supplies, shoe etc. Her mother still brought most of the items, for all her children. But what Susan didn't learn in school was about money, investments, the rule of 72, how much money you need for retirement, where to put your money so it can grow and have a savings for emergency money. Everyone need 6 months to 12 months of emergency saving so when a disaster come, they will be prepared. Just like the Coronavirus in March 3, 2020, people were not prepared for that fall and out of a job. We all were told to go to school, to college, get a job and later get your own place. Many parents never learn about saving money either, that is why we were not taught. Susan pray that, you get some idea about saving your money, while you are young. Start as soon as possible. Susan Sykes has two children and one grand-daughter. Susan wants to dedicate this book to her children, (Bria, Rod and Taniyah). Susan worked with the public all her life and got along with mostly everyone she came in contact with. Susan's mom had five children, she loves her mom very much and she is the middle child. Thank you, mother (Evelyn Brown) for all your hard work and your love. Susan knows, she on this earth for one reason and that is to win soul to Jesus and try to lead people in the right direction. She wants male/female to be educated on money. Especially the younger generation but it's for everyone, age is just a number. Things people didn't learn in schools, colleges, private schools and many more. Susan hope you find some kind of truth from this book and change your mind set. Start doing what you have read and you won't be disappointed in the future to come. Follow these examples in the book and what Susan has written. Follow me! Why don't you follow me, to a place where you can be free! We want to make this world a better place if we all can. Susan believe we can all do it if we stick to the examples and stick together. Stop making excuses instead, get knowledgeable and ask yourself, the reason WHY, you should do it for yourselves, your children and family. There is light and life at the end of the road. For many adults the road seems dark a lot of times but it's also your mind and the way you think. So, if you think you can't you are right and if you think you can have, you will have. Let's have money working for us. You are not alone! Thank you all who reads this book. This is just the beginning! I pray you be so blessed by this book.
