The Boy at the Keyhole Stephen Giles, 2018-09-01 For fans of Shirley Jackson, Sarah Waters and Daphne du Maurier, an electrifying debut about a boy left alone in his family's English estate with a housekeeper he suspects has murdered his mother Nine-year-old Samuel lives alone in a once-great estate in Surrey with the family's housekeeper, Ruth. His father is dead and his mother has been abroad for months, purportedly tending to her late husband's faltering business. She left in a hurry one night while Samuel was sleeping and did not say goodbye. Beyond her sporadic postcards, Samuel hears nothing from his mother. He misses her dearly and maps her journey in an atlas he finds in her study. Samuel's life is otherwise regulated by Ruth, who runs the house with an iron fist. Only she and Samuel know how brutally she enforces order. As rumors in town begin to swirl, Samuel wonders whether something more sinister is afoot. Perhaps his mother did not leave but was murdered—by Ruth. Artful, haunting and hurtling toward a psychological showdown, The Boy at the Keyhole is an incandescent debut about the precarious dance between truth and perception, and the shocking acts that occur behind closed doors.

The Woman at the Keyhole Judith Mayne, 1990-12-22 [The Woman at the Keyhole is one] of the most significant contributions to feminist film theory since the 1970s. -- SubStance ... this intelligent, eminently readable volume puts women's filmmaking on the main stage.... serves at once as introduction and original contribution to the debates structuring the field. Erudite but never obscure, effectively argued but not polemical, The Woman at the Keyhole should prove to be a valuable text for courses on women and cinema. -- The Independent

When we imagine a woman and a keyhole, it is usually a woman on the other side of the keyhole, as the proverbial object of the look, that comes to mind. In this work the author is not necessarily reversing the conventional image, but rather asking what happens when women are situated on both sides of the keyhole. In all of the films discussed, the threshold between subject and object, between inside and outside, between virtually all opposing pairs, is a central figure for the reinvention of cinematic narrative.

The Keyhole Thomas McCavour, 2015-06-26 What happens when Amanda finds a locked room in the barn and looks through the keyhole? And what happens when she sees a cat in the room? And what happens when she discovers that the room is full of her grandfather's memories about a cat named Toots? Amanda can actually see a picture of each memory when she looks through the keyhole. It's like looking at the TV, but there is no sound. Amanda asks her grandfather to explain each event. The keyhole opens up a treasure trove of adventure stories about a young Canadian boy and a cat, growing up during the depression years of the 30's. The stories are narrated in a series of conversations between Amanda and her grandfather. McCavour blends a series of life learning experiences and an accurate description of cat behavior into an exciting adventure for readers and cat lovers of all ages.

Keyhole Factory William Gillespie, 2012-11-01 Set in an alternate present that is a slightly, if dangerously, skewed version of our own, Keyhole Factory tracks the interwoven destinies of disparate characters up to and beyond the end of the world-as-we-know-it, brought on by a global super-virus. Beginning with a biting satire of an academic poetry conference, the novel moves on to encompass the stories of a poet-astronaut, a microbiologist contemplating an exit strategy from her high-level job designing biological weapons, a sports-car-driving killer who stages the aesthetic murders of utopian commune-dwellers, and a lone pirate radio disc jockey who may be the last person left alive broadcasting her story to nobody. Allowing form and content to shape each other, William Gillespie pries open the confusion in a moment of total crisis through a narrative web-work technique derived from deranged fiction pioneer Harry Stephen Keeler. Part imaginative free-for-all and part deeply felt examination of isolation and survival, the individual lives in Keyhole Factory shine through the chaos in all their beauty and tragedy. With his signature wit and originality, Gillespie spins a glittering fever-dream that questions our assumptions about the way we interpret events and our relation to the planet, without ever losing sight of the underlying experience of what it feels like to be a human being in the world we live in today.

The Keyhole Book Three JoAn Gilmore-Jackson, 2019-03-11

Louise Dantzler is the daughter of a senior Queen, Elizzie and an Elder or Holy man known as Papa. Her parents were enslaved coming from Africa at the turn of the century. They brought with them their native religion, known as Yoodoo, which is based on the Holy Bible and Christianity. However, Elizzie dies and Papa is left to raise Louise, her sister and two brothers. He solicits the aid of the Yoodoo Queens and Matrons to teach Louise the ways of the Yoodoo women as he understands she is in the direct bloodline for Queenship. This title, Senior Queen is never relinquished as the position is non-negotiable. Louise doesn't feel obligated to fill the shoes of her Mother and Grandmothers before her. She only wishes to live her life with her husband Tom and to raise her own family in her own way. That notion is short lived, and Louise is enthralled into a world of Lightness versus Darkness. As she molds the community into her idea of Yoodooism, she meets several interesting women and men along the way. She must rely on her wit, upbringing and God to help her make it through safely for her final reward. When you're alone, totally isolated yet at peace, or maybe you think you're at peace; maybe you're minding your own business or just listlessly sitting beside a body of water. Do you ever get the feeling that someone or better yet, something is watching you? Does your heart pick up an extra beat or two? Maybe your hands begin to sweat, and your mouth feels like it's full of dry, hot, desert sand. Do the hairs on your arms and back stand erect, giving way to tons of goosebumps covering your skin? You may even become dizzy and short of breath--even though the wind is gently blowing all around you. Then you look around the area and no one is there. You may even imagine that you're in Arkansas. And...if you can imagine, go further and sit yourself close to Cane Creek in Dumas. If you can experience all of that, just know that there is something watching you. All these symptoms lead toward the narrator for The Keyhole series. Can you guess who or what that is?The author, JoAn Gilmore Jackson was born in Dumas, Arkansas in 1954. She was the twelfth child of her Mother Alcurtis Dantzler Gilmore and the third of her Father Reverend Willie Gilmore. She heard tales of strange happenings in and along the Creek that ran behind their home, separating their farm from neighbors and friends. Some of the tales were so destructive to her psyche that she could not forget about them and is even now haunted by them. She lives in Pueblo, Colorado with her husband George and is the Mother of two. She has several grandchildren, the youngest, Wayne who loves to hear about her books and stories. Believing still that she lives in a haunted house--being the home she grew up in from around age six until now. Mrs. Jackson says her deceased parents, especially her Mother visits her frequently, and she is not afraid.A graduate of Colorado State University-Pueblo, Mrs. Jackson earned a degree (Cum Laude) in English with emphasis in Creative Writing. This book, The Keyhole Book Three/God is Still on the Throne is the final of The Keyhole trilogy. When asked why she thought of this book series,

JoAn Gilmore Jackson said, I wanted to tell this story and leave it to the Readers to digest whether it's believable or not. If it makes you wonder about the uneasiness in your spirit, I think I've done a good job. And if you stay awake at night, I've done an excellent job. Either way, I wish everyone a Happy Reading experience. God Bless.
