The Bloody Almanack: to which England is directed, to fore-know what shall come to passe, by that famous Astrologer, M. John Booker. Being a perfect Abstract of the Prophecies proved out of Scripture, by the noble Napier, etc

John Napier,1643 On the title-page to this tract is a woodcut, representing two stars with clouds about them. Above is The guide of Astrologers; Astra regunt homines, sed regit astra Deus appears below. Under the latter inscription is a half-length figure of a bearded man, with a staff in his left hand (? Booker). Near him is the Devil, holding a two-thonged whip. Behind the Devil is The Crosse of Rome a carriage, in which are seated the pope, a pilgrim holding a cross, and a naked human figure with a cross on the forehead. Below this is Rome a city with churches. On the right of Booker, if it be he, is London a city. Above the last is The Joy of England, i.e. a king (probably King Charles the First) on a throne with two councillors seated at either hand, and two men kneeling at a bar before him. On the king's left is The destruction of the World showing a curtain half withdrawn from before a dark field or ground, on which lie many feathers or fallen leaves. A skull and cross-bones occupy the lower corner of the woodcut, below the last.
