Navy Torpedo Program : MK-48 ADCAP Propulsion System Upgrade Not Needed United States. General Accounting Office,1992

Navy Torpedo Program U. S. Government Accountability Office (,2013-07 GAO reviewed the Navy's MK-48 Advanced Capability (ADCAP) torpedo propulsion system upgrade program, focusing on whether the: (1) Navy needs an upgraded propulsion system; (2) upgrade would meet Navy noise reduction requirements; and (3) Navy is conducting research in alternative noise reduction technology. GAO found that: (1) the current system would meet the Navy's requirements for the SSN-21 Seawolf submarine; (2) the Seawolf will have a very limited production run; (3) the Navy is continuing the development of the upgrade and will make it available to submarines that can fire MK-48 ADCAP torpedoes, although they operate at higher noise levels than the Seawolf, which limits the value of the quieter system; (4) the upgrade was not intended to meet and will not lead to meeting the Navy's 1986 noise reduction requirements; (5) the Navy has basic and exploratory research programs in alternative noise reduction technologies; and (6) cancelling the upgrade and continuing the other research would be in line with the Department of Defense's (DOD) revised weapons acquisition strategy.

Navy Torpedo Programs U. S. Government Accountability Office (,2013-07 GAO reviewed the Navy's plans to upgrade both the propulsion and the guidance and control systems of the MK-48 Advanced Capability torpedo (ADCAP), focusing on the: (1) need for the propulsion system upgrade; and (2) appropriateness of approving low-rate initial production of the guidance and control system. GAO found that: (1) the Navy believes the $249-million ADCAP propulsion system upgrade will reduce the launching submarine's vulnerability in shallow water; (2) the propulsion upgrade will not improve ADCAP performance or reduce the submarine's vulnerability to enemy attack because of the short ranges at which submarines are likely to be detected in shallow water; (3) the upgrade is not needed, since ADCAP is already rated operationally effective in shallow water; (4) the Navy did not establish a requirement to improve the propulsion system for use in open-ocean, deep water; and (5) low-rate initial production of the guidance and control system should not be approved until new software is developed and installed in mid-1998.
