Model Rules of Professional Conduct American Bar Association. House of Delegates, Center for Professional Responsibility (American Bar Association), 2007 The Model Rules of Professional Conduct provides an up-to-date resource for information on legal ethics. Federal, state and local courts in all jurisdictions look to the Rules for guidance in solving lawyer malpractice cases, disciplinary actions, disqualification issues, sanctions questions and much more. In this volume, black-letter Rules of Professional Conduct are followed by numbered Comments that explain each Rule's purpose and provide suggestions for its practical application. The Rules will help you identify proper conduct in a variety of given situations, review those instances where discretionary action is possible, and define the nature of the relationship between you and your clients, colleagues and the courts.

Life at Home in the Twenty-First Century Jeanne E. Arnold, Anthony P. Graesch, Elinor Ochs, Enzo Ragazzini, 2012-12-31 Winner of the 2014 John Collier Jr. Award Winner of the Jo Anne Stolaroff Cotsen Prize Life at Home in the Twenty-First Century cross-cuts the ranks of important books on social history, consumerism, contemporary culture, the meaning of material culture, domestic architecture, and household ethnoarchaeology. It is a distant cousin of Material World and Hungry Planet in content and style, but represents a blend of rigorous science and photography that these books can claim. Using archaeological approaches to human material culture, this volume offers unprecedented access to the middle-class American home through the kaleidoscopic lens of no-limits photography and many kinds of never-before acquired data about how people actually live their lives at home. Based on a rigorous, nine-year project at UCLA, this book has appeal not only to scientists but also to all people who share intense curiosity about what goes on at home in their neighborhoods. Many who read the book will see their own lives mirrored in these pages and can reflect on how other people cope with their mountains of possessions and other daily challenges.

Readers abroad will be equally fascinated by the contrasts between their own kinds of materialism and the typical American experience. The book will interest a range of designers, builders, and architects as well as scholars and students who research various facets of U.S. and global consumerism, cultural history, and economic history.

Results of Research Concerning Phosphorus-32 in Reactor Effluent, 1965 Several processes for reducing the concentration of radioisotopes in reactor effluent water have been developed and evaluated. Application of the high alum process for the treatment of reactor cooling water has resulted in a reduction in  $\text{p}^{32}$  concentration by a factor of 2.3 from pre-1961 levels. An additional factor of 2 could be obtained by substituting nitrate salts for the sulfates currently employed in the process. Addition of sodium silicate to the cooling water demonstrated to provide a factor of three reduction in the effluent concentration of  $\text{p}^{32}$ . Passage of reactor effluent water through a bed of aluminum turnings removed half of the  $\text{p}^{32}$  by adsorption on the aluminum corrosion film. The benefits from these treatments are cumulative; thus, by adoption of both sodium silicate addition and substitution of nitrate salts in the water treatment process the p32 concentration could be reduced to about 10% of the 1960 levels. Prior to 1961, it was shown that two-thirds of the p32 in-reactor effluent water resulted from activation of inert phosphorus, but that currently, 80% results from n, p reaction on S32. Phosphate ions were found to engage in complex reactions with the film on in-reactor surfaces and are retained for extended lengths of time, while sulfate ions are rapidly released from the film surfaces. Roughly two-thirds of the p32 was produced on the surface of aluminum fuel elements, and one-third on the aluminum tube wall. Zirconium components did not provide significant sites for the retention and neutron activation of p32 parent isotopes. The chemical form of radiophosphorus in reactor effluent water was determined, both during normal operation and during reactor shutdown. 29 refs., 6 tabs.

Separation of Phosphorus32 from Sulfur32 John Nicholson Butler,W. Y. Gissel,1950 Carrier-free radioactive phosphorus can be prepared in the pile by (n, p) process on sulfur(32). There are no by-products in this material except those formed from nuclear reactions of the chemical contaminants.

About 2 kg of specially purified sulfur is irradiated in a large aluminum can in the pile for a period of at least six weeks. The contents of the can are melted out, and the active phosphorus is extracted with weak nitric acid under pressure at a temperature greater than 120 deg C employing mechanical agitation. The waste molten sulfur and the active phosphorus extract are separated, and the latter is processed in order to remove chemical contaminants. Thus carrier-free active phosphorus produced in the Clinton pile is chemically separated from sulfur in multi-millicurie quantities.

The Unified Neutral Theory of Biodiversity and Biogeography (MPB-32) Stephen P. Hubbell, 2011-06-27 Despite its supreme importance and the threat of its global crash, biodiversity remains poorly understood both empirically and theoretically. This ambitious book presents a new, general neutral theory to explain the origin, maintenance, and loss of biodiversity in a biogeographic context. Until now biogeography (the study of the geographic distribution of species) and biodiversity (the study of species richness and relative species abundance) have had largely disjunct intellectual histories. In this book, Stephen Hubbell develops a formal mathematical theory that unifies these two fields. When a speciation process is incorporated into Robert H. MacArthur and Edward O. Wilson's now classical theory of island biogeography, the generalized theory predicts the existence of a universal, dimensionless biodiversity number. In the theory, this fundamental biodiversity number, together with the migration or dispersal rate, completely determines the steady-state distribution of species richness and relative species abundance on local to large geographic spatial scales and short-term to evolutionary time scales. Although neutral, Hubbell's theory is nevertheless able to generate many nonobvious, testable, and remarkably accurate quantitative predictions about biodiversity and biogeography. In many ways Hubbell's theory is the ecological analog to the neutral theory of genetic drift in genetics. The unified neutral theory of biogeography and biodiversity should stimulate research in new theoretical and empirical directions by ecologists, evolutionary biologists, and biogeographers.
