Service to the Fleet The North Vancouver Repair Ships David Shirlaw, In total, twenty-one maintenance ships were ordered from Canadian shipbuilders (ten from Burrard Drydock, six from West Coast Shipbuilders and five North Vancouver Ship Repair) for use by the Royal Navy. Sixteen 'Victory' type vessels were completed by West Coast shipbuilders but as the war ended, the orders for the final five ships were cancelled. These five vessels, Mull of Oa, Rattray Head, Orfordness, Selsey Bill and Tarbet Ness were completed as merchant ships and as they had been built to a high specification, found a ready market as cargo liners.

Defense Logistics Brian J. Lepore, 2008-08 Unscheduled ship maintenance and repairs is a high priority for the U.S. Navy. Such repairs are sometimes beyond the capability of the ship's crew to perform; cannot be deferred; and must be made at a remote location. In 1995 it was recommended that the former Naval Ship Repair Facility on Guam be closed. The Navy leased the property to the Guam Econ. Dev't. and Commerce Authority, which sub-leased the property to a private shipyard. In Jan. 2007 the Navy recommended allowing the private shipyard's lease on Navy land to expire in 2012. This report determines the extent to which the Navy has: (1) identified future ship repair requirements at Guam; and (2) identified and assessed options to address those requirements. Includes recommendations. Illus.

Ship Repairing Arun Kr Dev,Makaraksha Saha,George Bruce,2022-03-09 This book highlights the relationship between independent and dependent ship repairing variables of various combinations under linear and nonlinear form using actual data collected from shipyards. Independent variables refer to age, deadweight, cubic number, principal dimensions, and type of ships. Dependent variables refer to repairing time, docking time, repairing labor, docking labor, hull blasting renewal area, hull painting renewal area, pipe renewal length, structural steel renewal weight, and structural steel renewal locations. Mathematical models are developed involving appropriate variables using multiple linear regression analysis technique for different combinations of variables of ship repair. Adequacy of models is tested using statistical parameters like coefficients of multiple determination and F statistic (calculated and tabulated). Also, validation is presented to determine the deviation of model value from the observed value and their statistical parameters to justify the adequacy of the respective estimate models. The book also emphasises the importance of managing the labor force, reliable data collection and an effective management information system to manage this as well as keeping control of on-going repair contracts.
