Lectures in Islamic Banking Hanudin Amin,2021-10-18 In the contemporary practice of Islamic banking, everyone is given an equal chance to understand, feel and appreciate it accordingly. In fact, everyone is an Islamic banking scientist if he intends to establish a cogent knowledge pertinent to the Islamic banking industry and shares it with everyone else in his social circle. The industry is opened to everyone provided Shariah principles and existing Shariah governance are meticulously observed. In response to this concern, this book provides sufficient guidance at least for undergraduate students to observe these requirements and who really intend to advance their career in the industry and contribute significantly. This book provides a short but comprehensive overview pertinent to Islamic banking and finance where historical perspectives are brought into play. The coverages of the book are provided as follows: Islamic banking deposits after the introduction of the Islamic Financial Services Act 2013 (IFSA), new concepts of Islamic investment accounts that key differences between Islamic fixed deposits and Islamic investment accounts, Islamic financing concepts including some interesting discussions pertaining to Islamic debt policies presently implemented in some Islamic banks in Malaysia, Islamic automobile financing, Islamic personal cash financing, Islamic home financing, historical background of Islamic window and Islamic subsidiary in Malaysia, Islamic pawn financing and how it is distinct compared with its conventional peer; and financing evaluation and pricing from the context of Islamic banks. Some calculations are provided to expose students with an improved understanding of the Base Rate and how it is related to Islamic financing products.

Fisheries and Aquacultures Development in Sabah Fadzilah Majid Cooke,Ejria Salleh,Lee Hock Ann,2017-06-18 Fisheries and Aquaculture Development in Sabah: implications for Society, Culture and Ecology builds on a trend in studies of social change of taking the environment seriously. Coming from the disciplines of sociology, economics and marine science the authors deal with issues of sustainability in economic, social and ecological terms. The overall political ecology approach of the book diversifies into sub-themes as the chapters engage with frameworks on the ecological limits of economic development, entitlements and well-being, participatory development, gender and knowledge production, science and citizenship as well as the symbolic and material value of national and international borders. Ecological aquaculture introduces new livelihood opportunities as well as losses. And it has a degree of ecological costs depending on environmental conditions and power relations that affect local production. We argue in this book that social and environmental justice issues are connected so that effective solutions to environmental problems can only be devised if the social justice issues are paid attention to. This general thrust in placing centre stage social and environmental justice issues is not unique to Sabah since these are issues experienced by developing countries similarly positioned in their dependence on natural resources for economic development.
