Emden Franz Joseph Hohenzollern (fürst von),1928

Emden Prinz Franz Joseph von Hohenzollern,2018-09-03 During World War I, Franz Joseph Prinz von Hohenzollern served in Germany's Kaiserliche Marine (Imperial Navy) as the second torpedo officer on the light cruiser SMS Emden at the Battle of Cocos. The SMS Emden had an extraordinary record capturing British ships. This book, which was first published in its English translation in 1928, is a fascinating record of Franz Joseph's naval service on the SMS Emden. SMS Emden ("His Majesty's Ship Emden") was the second and final member of the Dresden class of light cruisers built for the Imperial German Navy (Kaiserliche Marine). Named after the town of Emden, she was laid down at the Kaiserliche Werft (Imperial Dockyard) in Danzig in 1906. Her hull was launched in May 1908, and completed in July 1909. She had one sister ship, Dresden. Like the preceding Königsberg-class cruisers, Emden was armed with ten 10.5 cm (4.1 in) guns and two torpedo tubes. Emden spent the majority of her career overseas in the German East Asia Squadron, based in Tsingtao, in the Kiautschou Bay concession in China. In 1913, she came under the command of Karl von Müller, who would captain the ship during WWI. At the outbreak of hostilities, Emden captured a Russian steamer and converted her into the commerce raider Cormoran. Emden rejoined the East Asia Squadron, after which she was detached for independent raiding in the Indian Ocean. The cruiser spent nearly two months operating in the region and captured nearly two dozen ships. On October 28, 1914, Emden launched a surprise attack on Penang; in the resulting Battle of Penang, she sank the Russian cruiser Zhemchug and the French destroyer Mousquet. The SMS Emden's extraordinary record capturing British ships resulted in all those who served on her, including Franz Joseph, being given the right to add the ship's name to the end of their surnames.

The Last Cruise of a German Raider Wes Olson,2018-07-30 The story of the German light cruiser SMS _Emden_ has been the subject of over a dozen books since her destruction at the hands of the Australian light cruiser HMAS _Sydney_ on 9 November 1914. Accounts of _Emden_'s raiding activities, her loss on the Cocos Islands, and the escape of her landing party have also appeared in official histories and books on the First World War at sea. No English-language book, however, has pieced together a comprehensive account of the action and the events before and after. In this detailed and riveting new book, Wes Olson has made extensive use of a wealth of first-hand accounts from letters, diaries, memoirs and German survivor statements to produce a detailed reconstruction of the battle at Cocos. By breaking the one-and-a-half-hour action down into ten-minute blocks an accurate, chronological and credible picture has been created, and the extensive use of quotations gives the story a unique vividness. But the book is much more than the account of one naval battle. _The Emden_'s activities as a raider at the beginning of the war are outlined; the significance of the departure of the first ANZAC troop convoy, and _Sydney_'s involvement explained. The Cocos raid and the landing of von Mcke's party and the dispatch of _Sydney_ to investigate are covered, and Captain Glossop's controversial decision to open fire on the wreck of the _Emden_ is analysed. And drawing on the reports produced by Sydney's surgeons, the book presents a facet of naval action often overlooked namely the effect of high explosive shells on the human body. Employing the wealth of archival and photographic material, as well as the numerous first-hand accounts of the German, British and Australian participants, the author has written a work that takes the reader right to the centre of the action and brings alive the immediacy and horror of naval warfare for those who took part.

The Light Cruiser SMS Emden Samir Karmieh,2015-09-19 SMS Emden light cruiser was built by Kaiserliche Werft Danzig dockyard (nowadays Gdańsk in Poland). The construction process began in 1906, the launching of the ship took place on 26 May 1908. Together with SMS Dresden, she belonged to Dresden protected cruiser class. SMS Emden was put into service on 1 April 1910. Eleven days later she was sent to the German colony Qingdao (Tsingtao) in China. The destination was reached on September that year. There the ship was incorporated into German East Asia Squadron. In 1913 Lieutenant-Commander Karl von Müller took command of the ship. He was soon promoted to the rank of full Commander.

Gentlemen of War Dan Van der Vat,1984 SMS Emden was a light cruiser of the Imperial German Navy in World War I. The Emden raided Allied shipping in the Indian Ocean early in the war, sinking or capturing thirty Allied merchant vessels and warships. She was run aground by her captain to prevent her from sinking, after engaging the more powerful HMAS Sydney at the Battle of Cocos.--Wikipedia.

Emdens Last Voyage Douglas John Walker,2019-10-10 A pictorial memoir of The Battle of Cocos, which occurred on the morning of 9th November 1914, and eventuated in the bloody encounter of the SMS Emden and HMAS Sydney. Corporal Douglas Walker had worked on Cocos Island, and at the time of the Emden attack, was working at the Singapore office of the Eastern Extension Cable Company when the SOS messages came through....-----These historical stories, as told by the Captain Glossop of HMAS Sydney to Banjo Paterson, a war correspondent only 4 days after the event, and Kapitänleutnant von Mücke's translated story of the Emden landing party and their escape on the schooner Ayesha to Germany.

The Kaiser's Raider! Two Accounts of the S. M. S. Emden During the First World War by One of Its Officers Hellmuth von Mücke,2012 Two classics of war at sea The author of this book, von Mücke wrote two accounts of his naval experiences in the Imperial German Navy during the First World War and both are brought together in this special Leonaur edition. Mücke was the executive officer and first lieutenant on the light cruiser SMS Emden. The Emden raided commercial shipping from her base at Tsingtao, China, into the Indian Ocean. After a four month raiding spree she was finally discovered and destroyed by the Australian Navy light cruiser Sydney. Prior to the arrival of the Sydney, von Mücke, commanding a 53 man landing party had gone ashore on Direction Island in the Cocos group to disable a wireless station and from there witnessed his ship's demise. Upon realising his small command was cut adrift, von Mücke seized the schooner Ayesha and began an epic 11,000 km journey of escape across sea and land. Mücke's writings are essential reading for anyone interested in the Imperial German Navy and true stories of high adventure at sea. Leonaur editions are newly typeset and are not facsimiles; each title is available in softcover and hardback with dustjacket.

The Ayesha Hellmuth Von Mücke,2017-05-17 This is a phenomenal story about the escape of the landing crew of the SMS Emden in 1914. It tells of their commandeering of a ship, the Ayesha, and their subsequent travels from the Keeling Islands to Africa, across parts of Arabia, and finally home to Germany. It is an incredible tale of perseverance.

The "Emden" (Classic Reprint) Hellmuth Von Mücke,2017-10-12 Excerpt from The Emden Finally, at the order of the Emden's Commander, some of the survivors ran up something white. Before the ship was surrendered, the German flag was torn into shreds and cast into the sea. More than two years later the English succeeded in salving the Emden, and she is now to fight for the enemy she once pursued.
