Space Tug Murray Leinster,2013-03-14 Joe Kenmore heard the airlock close with a sickening wheeze and then a clank. In desperation he turned toward Haney. My God, we've been locked out! Through the transparent domes of their space helmets, Joe could see a look of horror and disbelief pass across Haney's face. But it was true! Joe and his crew were locked out of the Space Platform. Four thousand miles below circled the Earth. Under Joe's feet rested the solid steel hull of his home in outer space. But without tools there was no hope of getting back inside. Joe looked at his oxygen meter. It registered thirty minutes to live.

Space Tug Murray Leinster,2017-12-28 Joe had helped launch the first Space Platform-that initial rung in man's ladder to the stars. But the enemies who had ruthlessly tried to destroy the space station before it left Earth were still at work. They were plotting to destroy Joe's mission!

Space Tug Murray Leinster,2015-10-20 To the world at large, of course, it was just another day. A different sort entirely at different places on the great, round, rolling Earth, but nothing out of the ordinary. It was Tuesday on one side of the Date Line and Monday on the other. It was so-and-so's wedding anniversary and so-and-so's birthday and another so-and-so would get out of jail today. It was warm, it was cool, it was fair, it was cloudy. One looked forward to the future with confidence, with hope, with uneasiness or with terror according to one's temperament and one's geographical location and past history. To most of the human race this was nothing whatever but just another day. But to Joe Kenmore it was a most particular day indeed. Here, it was the gray hour just before sunrise and already there were hints of reddish colorings in the sky. It was chilly, and somehow the world seemed still and breathless. To Joe, the feeling of tensy marked this morning off from all the other mornings of his experience. He got up and began to dress, in Major Holt's quarters back of that giant steel half-globe called the Shed, near the town of Bootstrap. He felt queer because he felt so much as usual. By all the rules, he should have experienced a splendid, noble resolution and a fiery exaltation, and perhaps even an admirable sensation of humility and unworthiness to accomplish what was expected of him today. And, deep enough inside, he felt suitable emotion. But it happened that he couldn't take time to feel things adequately today....

Space Tug Gary Cox,2011-05-01 Space Tug is a Science Fiction novel about a man faced with a monumental struggle involving the fate of mankind. Tough philosophical questions of right and wrong force Captain Bontober to reach deep inside for answers he didn't know he had. Aboard a giant space ship he finds commando robots, laser guns, ancient aliens, and tons of extraterrestrial technology. He learns a terrible secret and only he can set things right, but it begs the unthinkable question, 'Do I save myself or save the world?' Gary Cox dares to explore these issues in areas that are usually off limits. Space Tug will stay with you long after you put it down.
