District Energy System Design Christian Inard ,Jérôme Le Dréau,2020-12-29 The articles presented in this Special Issue cover different aspects of the urban planning process, such as simulation, optimization or decision-making. The authors highlighted the importance of performing an integrated design of the district, considering different sectors, different energy vectors and different operation modes. In order to better integrate renewable and residual energy sources (R²ES), careful design of systems and storage solutions should be performed. Different storage solutions were tested, ranging from large-scale thermal energy storage to vehicle batteries or the thermal mass of buildings. Van der Heijde et al. (2019) proposed a two-layer design optimization algorithm to design a district heating network with solar thermal collectors, seasonal thermal energy storage and excess heat injection. Pajot et al. (2019) also performed an optimization of the sizing and control of energy systems in a district equipped with heat pumps, with thermal energy storage or thermal mass utilization. A hybrid distribution system, coupling the thermal and electrical networks, was proposed by Widl et al. (2019). Arnaudo et al. (2019) used the vehicle-to-grid (V2G) concept to decrease the overloading of the electrical distribution network during heat pump operation. Finally, Kazmi et al. (2019) proposed an integrated decision-making planning approach for a better integration of R²ES in the distribution network. The complexity of urban planning leads to the development of new tools and methodologies. Until now, operation was poorly integrated in the design phase. New urban building energy modeling tools were proposed by the different authors. These tools are either based on co-simulations or integrated solutions to be able to capture the fine dynamics of a district. The difficulty of generating the input data for the models was also discussed. Regarding the methodology, most articles proposed a two-stage optimization procedure to optimize both the operational and design aspects. Mixed-integer linear programming (MILP) and genetic algorithms were often used to find optimal solutions.

Embedded SoPC Design with Nios II Processor and VHDL Examples Pong P. Chu, 2011-08-29 The book is divided into four major parts. Part I covers HDL constructs and synthesis of basic digital circuits. Part II provides an overview of embedded software development with the emphasis on low-level I/O access and drivers. Part III demonstrates the design and development of hardware and software for several complex I/O peripherals, including PS2 keyboard and mouse, a graphic video controller, an audio codec, and an SD (secure digital) card. Part IV provides three case studies of the integration of hardware accelerators, including a custom GCD (greatest common divisor) circuit, a Mandelbrot set fractal circuit, and an audio synthesizer based on DDFS (direct digital frequency synthesis) methodology. The book utilizes FPGA devices, Nios II soft-core processor, and development platform from Altera Co., which is one of the two main FPGA manufactures. Altera has a generous university program that provides free software and discounted prototyping boards for educational institutions (details at <http://www.altera.com/university>). The two main educational prototyping boards are known as DE1 ($99) and DE2 ($269). All experiments can be implemented and tested with these boards. A board combined with this book becomes a “turn-key” solution for the SoPC design experiments and projects. Most HDL and C codes in the book are device independent and can be adapted by other prototyping boards as long as a board has similar I/O configuration.

Ciudad de Llegada Doug Saunders, 2014-06-12 Un trabajo extraordinario que muestra como las migraciones de las zonas rurales hacia los centros urbanos se han convertido en uno de los factores económicos y políticos más relevantes del siglo XXI. Por primera vez en la historia, más personas viven en las ciudades que en el campo, y muchas de ellas se abarrotan en los arrabales de las ciudades. Este movimiento migratorio, el más grande de la historia, afecta de forma directa a un tercio de la población mundial; una gran oleada que está creando nuevos espacios urbanos, lo que Saunders ha acuñado como «ciudades de llegada», focos de conflicto y cambio, centros ocultos de actividad febril que reestructuran nuestras ciudades y transforman nuestras economías. De Estambul a Los Ángeles, de Varsovia a Shenzhen, Doug Saunders muestra cómo el éxito o el fracaso de estas inmensas comunidades surgidas en los márgenes de las ciudades tradicionales tienen un profundo efecto a escala local, regional y global. Ciudad de Llegada, que obtuvo el premio Donner al mejor libro de no ficción y fue finalista de los premios Lionel Gerber y Shaughnessy Cohen, es un fascinante recorrido por los lugares clave de esta migración final y explora las posibilidades, los riesgos y las dificultades inherentes al desarrollo de un nuevo orden mundial. Reseñas: «Revolucionario. Ciudad de Llegada está repleta de detalles reveladores y no puede ser más oportuno.» The New York Times «Una visión optimista y muy humana de la urbanización global. Esperemos que urbanistas y políticos presten atención.» The Wall Street Journal

Crossing Platforms A Macintosh/Windows Phrasebook Adam Engst, David Pogue, 1999 Like travelers in a foreign land, Mac users working in Windows or Windows users working on a Mac often find themselves in unfamiliar territory with no guidebook--until now. Engst and Pogue assembled a handy way of translating elements from one platform to the other, or for deciphering elements that are new and unfamiliar.
