Samuel B. Allison,H. Avis Perdue

The Story in Primary Instruction Hannah Avis Perdue, Samuel B. Allison, 2017-06-18 The greatest need of the primary school to-day is some positive content or subject matter of instruction. The popular conception of such a school is that its main function is to teach the young child to read, write, and cipher. That is, that it has to do mainly with the formal aspects of language and numbers. So long as a certain amount of facility is gained in these formal arts, there is little disposition to demand anything more. Even so great an authority as the Committee of Fifteen has championed this view, and has given as its deliberate judgment that the first four years of school life should be devoted to the mastery of the formal phases of instruction. While it may be contended that it is not meant to exclude the giving of a positive subject matter, still it is interpreted as sanctioning the present obvious over-emphasis of the formal side of language in our primary schools. A strict conformity to this formal program would mean that the first four years of school life, the most impressionable[6] period in the pupil's school career, are to be empty of any real subject matter. The mastery of written and printed forms is to be set up as an end in itself, losing sight of the fact that they are but means for conveying the thought, feelings, experiences, and aspirations of the race from one generation to another. When we consider what the child at the age of six or seven really is; when we consider his love of story, his hunger for the concrete material of knowledge, his deep interest in the widening of his experience,—it is evident that such a course is out of all harmony with his real nature. It is the giving of stones when the cry is for bread. It is even worse than the proverbial making of bricks without straw. It is attempting to make bricks with straw alone.

5 Steps to Help You Craft Your Powerful Origin Story Carmel O' Reilly, 2023-02-22

INTRODUCTION Your origin story is your backstory that reveals how you - the protagonist, became the leading character in your WorkLife story. Comic books tell the story of how the characters gained their superpowers and the circumstances under which they became superheroes. Like a comic book hero, your story needs a history that tells how you gained your superpowers and became a superhero in your WorkLife story. In this lesson, you will learn to recognise the turning point or the moment of transformation in which your character (you) evolves in a significant way or embarks on a mission that must be completed. You will learn to identify the events along the way where you recognised and took ownership of your superpowers that turned you into the Superhero of your Origin Story. You will learn The Art of Insightful Self-Questions and Effective Self-Feedback. You will learn to embrace and fine-tune your powers of Self-Awareness and Observation (superpowers in my book) through the Art of Journaling and Thinking. You will learn how to use Take Ten as a way to get your initial thoughts out of your head and down in writing to help you explore your ideas and figure out your story. You will learn how to Let Your Mind Wander and Wonder to help you think more deeply about what you want to say in developing your story. You will learn how to use speaking practices to give you a sense of how your story sounds and flows. You will be encouraged to test out your story on a trusted audience before (perhaps) sharing it with a wider audience - should that be a mission you want to accomplish. Through Jen's story (the protagonist in the story/case study in this lesson), you will learn how to use The 5 Steps To Help You Create Your Powerful Origin Story.
