Letters to My Wife, A WWII Love Story Ellen Anderson, 2014-08-11 Letters that were found in a small cedar chest Mom saved that Dad wrote when he was in WWII. From 1942-1946 these letters tell interesting war stories & facts and a love story like no other. Dad wrote to Mom every moment that he could. Every breath & every step he took was for her. Dad was a trailblazer and fought on the front line in France and Germany. He was a radio man and was in charge of managing the location of his troop. This story will make you laugh and certainly make you cry. It is a truly amazing story!

U. S. Postal Service Gerald P. Barnes, 1999-04 Provides information on USPS's efforts to implement Delivery Point Sequencing (DPS), which is the automated rather than manual sorting of letters in the exact order carriers deliver them. Manual sorting of letters by carriers is one of the USPS's most costly letter distribution operations. This report (1) determines the Service's goals for DPS implementation, its projected letter carrier workhour savings, and the extent to which the Service has achieved these, and (2) identifies any remaining issues that may affect the Service's ability to achieve its 1998 DPS goals, including any actions that the Service has taken to address these issues.

Hidden and Devalued Feminized Labour in the Digital Humanities Julianne Nyhan, 2022-12-22 Hidden and Devalued Feminized Labour in the Digital Humanities examines the data-driven labour that underpinned the Index Thomisticus—a preeminent project of the incunabular digital humanities—and advanced the data-foundations of computing in the Humanities. Through oral history and archival research, Nyhan reveals a hidden history of the entanglements of gender in the intellectual and technical work of the early digital humanities. Setting feminized keypunching in its historical contexts—from the history of concordance making, to the feminization of the office and humanities computing—this book delivers new insight into the categories of work deemed meritorious of acknowledgement and attribution and, thus, how knowledge and expertise was defined in and by this field. Focalizing the overlooked yet significant data-driven labour of lesser-known individuals, this book challenges exclusionary readings of the history of computing in the Humanities. Contributing to ongoing conversations about the need for alternative genealogies of computing, this book is also relevant to current debates about diversity and representation in the Academy and the wider computing sector. Hidden and Devalued Feminized Labour in the Digital Humanities will be of interest to researchers and students studying digital humanities, library and information science, the history of computing, oral history, the history of the humanities, and the sociology of knowledge and science.
