The Girls Abigail Pesta,2019-08-06 The inside story of how serial predator Larry Nassar got away with abusing hundreds of gymnasts for decades -- and how a team of brave women banded together to bring him down. We think of Larry Nassar as the despicable sexual predator of Olympic gymnasts-but there is an astonishing, untold story. For decades, in a small-town gym in Michigan, he honed his manipulations on generations of aspiring gymnasts. Kids from the neighborhood. Girls with hopes of a college scholarship. Athletes and parents with a dream. In The Girls, these brave women for the first time describe Nassar's increasingly bold predations through the years, recount their warning calls unheeded, and demonstrate their resiliency in the face of a nightmare. The Girls is a profound exploration of trust, ambition, betrayal, and self-discovery. Award-winning journalist Abigail Pesta unveils this deeply reported narrative at a time when the nation is wrestling with the implications of the MeToo movement. How do the women who grew up with Nassar reconcile the monster in the news with the man they once trusted? In The Girls, we learn that their answers to that wrenching question are as rich, insightful, and varied as the human experience itself.

The Werley Boys John Pesta,2019-06-09 The Werley Boys is short story about a small town, about revenge - and one controversial outhouse. Some people are unhappy with the Werley brothers, two old-timers who refuse to join modernity and hook up their home to the town's sewer system. But the brothers aren't so thrilled themselves. They're angry at the people they call the communists - folks on the town board who would like them to give up the backyard convenience that has served them admirably since, well, forever. One evening, under cover of darkness, two town stalwarts take action. And the Werley boys will never look at their trusty outhouse the same way again.

How Dare the Sun Rise Sandra Uwiringiyimana,Abigail Pesta,2017-05-16 Junior Library Guild Selection * New York Public Library's Best Books for Teens * Goodreads Choice Awards Nonfiction Finalist * Chicago Public Library's Best of the Best Books for Teens: Nonfiction * 2018 Texas Topaz Nonfiction List * YALSA's 2018 Quick Picks List * Bank Street's 2018 Best Books of the Year "This gut-wrenching, poetic memoir reminds us that no life story can be reduced to the word 'refugee.'" —New York Times Book Review "A critical piece of literature, contributing to the larger refugee narrative in a way that is complex and nuanced." —School Library Journal (starred review) This profoundly moving memoir is the remarkable and inspiring true story of Sandra Uwiringiyimana, a girl from the Democratic Republic of the Congo who tells the tale of how she survived a massacre, immigrated to America, and overcame her trauma through art and activism. Sandra was just ten years old when she found herself with a gun pointed at her head. She had watched as rebels gunned down her mother and six-year-old sister in a refugee camp. Remarkably, the rebel didn't pull the trigger, and Sandra escaped. Thus began a new life for her and her surviving family members. With no home and no money, they struggled to stay alive. Eventually, through a United Nations refugee program, they moved to America, only to face yet another ethnic disconnect. Sandra may have crossed an ocean, but there was now a much wider divide she had to overcome. And it started with middle school in New York. In this memoir, Sandra tells the story of her survival, of finding her place in a new country, of her hope for the future, and how she found a way to give voice to her people.

The More You Stir It John Pesta,2016-10-31 After pleading guilty in Los Angeles to selling a small amount of marijuana to a friend, seventeen-year-old Kelly Marcott was put on probation as a first-time offender. In an effort to keep him out of further trouble, his mother, who is divorced, obtained permission for him to leave California and live with her father-in-law, Chester Marcott, on a farm in Indiana. Soon after moving in with his grandfather, Kelly finds some old photos of local members of the Ku Klux Klan in the attic. Most of the Klansmen are slimly posing in tattered robes and hoods, but in one photo six of them are standing near a black man who is hanging from a tree. The Klansmen's names are written on the back of the photos. Kelly has learned that no one was ever arrested for the lynching, which occurred seventy-six years earlier, in 1936. He wants any lynchers who are still alive to pay for their crime. To accomplish this he started an alternative newspaper at Campbellsville High School, where he is now enrolled. His paper is called Mother Mucker--the Mother of All Muckrakers. He and some new friends have already published a few issues, and in one of those issues the names of the Klansmen were revealed. As the novel begins, Phi Larrison, editor-in-chief of The Campbellsville Gleaner, hears about Kelly for the first time.

Letting Go of the Thief Pamela D. Pesta, 2018-05-30 If You're Dealing with Alcoholism, this Book is for You. Letting go of the Thief, is a ninety day voyage into alcoholic thinking. Welcome to the chaotic thrashing of a mind, pulsating with intoxication. Spend a few moments in the whirlwind of shame, guilt, and utter desperation. The thief will shrewdly expose the terror of that human soul drenched in remorse and fear. You will never fully understand this harrowing disease, until you jump in to that circus. It's always dark now; I have left the light behind me. I chose this, as that the thief snickered in the corner. He promised the soothing relief of unconscious living. He understood my need to hide. The decision to choose you instead, was no longer mine to make, admitted the alcoholic. Enter in to the conquest for sobriety where the thief patiently prepares to destroy you at any given moment. Feel the whirling sensations of recovery in its' happiest times and in its' most difficult ones. I'm not sure that I'm going to make it today. One little drink won't hurt me. I've been on this sobriety wagon long enough; I think I'm cured now. Why am I glaring at that woman who just ordered her second glass of wine? questioned the recovering alcoholic. The problem drinker will be thoroughly reminded as to why they can never touch alcohol again. Loved ones and normal drinkers will finally experience alcoholic contemplation, both in sobriety and active addiction. Jump into the circus and witness the chattering mind, of one who suffers from this disease.

King Of The Yellow Jackets John Pesta, 2020-05-31 A little boy who thinks he can speak with bees. A man haunted for life by a childhood secret. A woman's obsession with her husband's obsession with pin-up models. In this anthology collecting a lifetime of short-story writing, John Pesta tells deeply human stories through characters whose experiences are equal parts haunting, funny and poignant, whether the setting is a 1950s childhood or an imagined, and slightly twisted, near future. Many of these stories originally appeared in acclaimed literary magazines including Sou'wester, Prairie Schooner and The Bridge. A few make their debut here in this anthology. All draw upon a life spent observing intriguing people and their enigmatic lives - fiction inspired by Pesta's Italian-Hungarian upbringing in Pennsylvania, his years spent in academia as a professor of English literature, and decades devoted to editing a historic newspaper in the heart of small-town America.

Spinning Through Warm Air Kathleen Pesta, 2015-05-08 Spinning through Warm Air is a debut collection of 41 poems which invites the reader to take a closer look at the everyday moments of life. A long, frigid winter, a stop behind a yellow school bus, a reflection on what can erode a marriage and a memory of first love, as well as the struggle to live in grace and harmony with the question of Otherness, all encourage readers to look at their own world and to see that there is more there than they may have realized. Ultimately uplifting, but never sentimental, these poems pay tribute to the beauty of the ordinary. Three of the poems in the collection have been previously published in America, Educational Forum, and English Journal.

Crates John Pesta, 2019-11-25 In the tradition-bound 1950s, a young woman wants her freedom. Her husband wants her back. And their son is searching for himself. The time and place is Allentown, Pennsylvania, in 1955. Lorene, a young mother who married too early, sets out to reinvent herself after leaving a cheating husband, while raising Stevie, a moody and inventive eleven-year-old who is trying to find his place in a fractured family. Seeking a future she hasn't yet defined, Lorene takes a roommate, Becky, who at first seems naive but becomes a clear-eyed confidant; she herself is shedding a dark past. Lorene meets a new man, but does he represent freedom, or a distraction as she seeks new direction in her life? Her ex, Tom, doesn't yet realize Lorene is becoming someone else. And Stevie finds escape by secretly building an intricate maze inside a stack of wooden tobacco crates behind a cigar factory. Lorene and Tom, too, are navigating a labyrinth of their own design - a maze of midnight diners, long-haul trucking, changing families, and drifting expectations in an America on the edge of a profound shift.
