Shadowbox Lee McAulay, 2014-06-17 Paris 1832.

Fleeing a crime he cannot forget, Louis Beauregard drowns the memory in debauchery and revels - a life of excess that threatens to alienate his friends and cast him adrift in a city famous for glittering seductions and violent Revolution. Mad, bad and dangerous to know, his trail attracts others who seek his fortune. But one of these men has a deeper desire: to avenge the death of his father. Amongst the artisans of Montmartre and the tombs of Notre Dame, he will hunt Louis down and bring him to justice. Of any sort. Both haunted by the death of the same man. Each striving to find meaning in the midst of their grief. And beneath it all, the Sacred Kingship of Old Europe, a destiny that drives men to destroy their rivals - or their dreams. SHADOWBOX is the spellbinding new novel by the author of THE LAST RHINEMAIDEN.

This Little Shadowbox Roy Krumnow, 2020-01-06 Choices, our lives are filled with them. Some are made for us, like family. Others are easy like what to eat for lunch or to take a taxi or a bus. Still others carry heavy consequences and are not to be made lightly. Cable Dalton was a man that believed a person should live (good or bad) by the choices they make. It was in those choices that he felt a person's character could be realized. This character people have would bring about friendship, relations, and the future. All he ask by those choices were honesty and loyalty and on that he would not waver. In this book we find people around Cable made unexpected choices which changed his future forever. By holding firm to his convictions of honesty and loyalty he began to understand why those choices were made.
