Michael O'Leary Matt Cooper,2018-09-27 September 2017. Ryanair cancels over 700,000 bookings and its powerful PR juggernaut comes shuddering to a halt. For once, the airline's aggressive and flamboyant CEO, Michael O'Leary, is contrite and apologetic.
A month later Ryanair announces increased passenger traffic for October, year-on-year growth and increased profits. Its share price soars. For the moment, it appears, a fundamental shake-up of Europe's biggest airline is off the table. But questions remain about the causes of the debacle and O'Leary's role in it. Michael O'Leary lifts the veil on the wildly successful and wildly controversial Ryanair CEO. Based on extensive research - including with close associates of O'Leary - the book examines O'Leary's personality, beliefs and obsessions and describes how these have moulded the business he runs.
Written by a multi-award-winning journalist and broadcaster, with a thirty-year career covering business and current affairs, it is a fascinating insight into the business behind the man, and the man behind the business.

Seeking Gold and Second Chances Janine Esther Donaldson, 2012 Looks at the early pioneers who called Waikaia home. From murderers, bigamists, bankrupts, arsonists and addicts to law enforcers, business owners and farmers, they all arrived seeking gold and second chances.

The Life of James K. Baxter Francis Michael McKay, 1990 Widely considered to be the greatest poet New Zealand has produced, James K. Baxter (1926-1972) was full of contradictions: a poet who spent much of his time exercising a concern for society's outcasts; a man with intense loyalty to his country who frequently condemned its institutions; a devout convert to Roman Catholicism whose life did not follow many of the usual practices of the church. This volume is the definitive biography of James K. Baxter, a man whose life and ideas were central to the New Zealand experience.

Whare Raupo Gavin McLean, 2007-01-01 Publishing attracts dedicated individuals who work beyond the call of duty or financial justification to write, publish, sell, distribute, and account for something they love. In New Zealand, there has not been a more dedicated bunch over so long a time as the people at Reed. Whare Raupo is an insider's guide to what created and sustained the House of Reed from its origins as a religious bookselling hobby in Edwardian Dunedin in 1907 to Reed Publishing (NZ) in 2007. Gavin

McLean spent six years with unfettered access to the records and current workings of Reed. In addition to interviews with the Reed family, previous and current staff, authors and those in the wider book trade, he read in its entirety the usual daily correspondence of more than 40 years between Reed uncle (Alfred Hamish), who founded the firm, and nephew (Alexander Wyclif, or 'Clif'), who made it the biggest publisher in Australasia. The result is the most comprehensive and frank history ever written of a New Zealand publisher. Dedicated people are also passionate people, and Whare Raupo will take you behind the scenes to the great achievements and crises of the country's premier publisher, the clashes of personality, the lashes of genius, the financial ups and downs, and the authors whose work has entered the national lexicon. In its first 25 years A.H. Reed built up a prosperous business specialising in Sunday School supplies, branching into secular publishing after A.W. boldly established a Wellington office in the midst of the Depression. Stories from its second and third quarter-centuries are the stuff of publishing legend, which McLean explores with verve. Here you will meet authors such as Denis Glover, Barry Crump, Mona Anderson and Janet Frame, as well as the editors who kept them in order, and the presses rolling. The most recent 25 years have marked unprecedented change to the industry, and like all of the nation's large book publishers Reed is now in international ownership. Unapologetically, the modern company keeps to the traditions and relationships built up by the Reed family and those who worked with them, while expanding into new fields of opportunity. More than the story of a single firm, Whare Raupo explores the multi-faceted process of making and selling books, and the personalities involved, with a wealth of illustrations that recreate the spirit of Reed through the years.

An Angel at My Table Janet Frame, 2016-12-01 The autobiography of New Zealand's most significant writer New Zealand's preeminent writer Janet Frame brings the skill of an extraordinary novelist and poet to these vivid and haunting recollections, gathered here for the first time in a single volume. From a childhood and adolescence spent in a poor but intellectually intense railway family, through life as a student, and years of incarceration in mental hospitals, eventually followed by her entry into the saving world of writers and the Mirror City that sustains them, we are given not only a record of the events of a life, but also the transformation of ordinary facts and ideas into a shining palace of mirrors. Frame's journey of self-discovery, from New Zealand to London, to Paris and Barcelona, and then home again, is a heartfelt and courageous account of a writer's beginnings as well as one woman's personal struggle to survive. This book contains selections from the long out-of-print collection entitled Janet Frame: An Autobiography (George Brazillier, 1991), which itself was originally published in three volumes: To the Is-land, An Angel at My Table, and The Envoy from Mirror City.
