A Pattern Language Christopher Alexander, 2018-09-20 You can use this book to design a house for yourself with your family; you can use it to work with your neighbors to improve your town and neighborhood; you can use it to design an office, or a workshop, or a public building. And you can use it to guide you in the actual process of construction. After a ten-year silence, Christopher Alexander and his colleagues at the Center for Environmental Structure are now publishing a major statement in the form of three books which will, in their words, lay the basis for an entirely new approach to architecture, building and planning, which will we hope replace existing ideas and practices entirely. The three books are The Timeless Way of Building, The Oregon Experiment, and this book, A Pattern Language. At the core of these books is the idea that people should design for themselves their own houses, streets, and communities. This idea may be radical (it implies a radical transformation of the architectural profession) but it comes simply from the observation that most of the wonderful places of the world were not made by architects but by the people. At the core of the books, too, is the point that in designing their environments people always rely on certain languages, which, like the languages we speak, allow them to articulate and communicate an infinite variety of designs within a forma system which gives them coherence. This book provides a language of this kind. It will enable a person to make a design for almost any kind of building, or any part of the built environment. Patterns, the units of this language, are answers to design problems (How high should a window sill be? How many stories should a building have? How much space in a neighborhood should be devoted to grass and trees?). More than 250 of the patterns in this pattern language are given: each consists of a problem statement, a discussion of the problem with an illustration, and a solution. As the authors say in their introduction, many of the patterns are archetypal, so deeply rooted in the nature of things that it seemly likely that they will be a part of human nature, and human action, as much in five hundred years as they are today.

Modules on Developing Life Skills of Four to Five Year Old Children Using Digital Stories and Activities Priscilla Angelique Pegollo, MAEd,2022-03-18 The concept of the modules is based on the author's observations in the early education system that is failing to deliver the outcomes needed to advance the young learner's social skills and development. This scenario will, later on, affect the education opportunities in the future which will contribute to the country's economic growth. Thus, the successful performance in preschool needs to be supported by life skills and values which should be fostered by our education systems. Teaching life skills with hands-on activities is a bit behind because most of the preschool curriculum are merely focused on academics in preparation for Grade 1. The modules are designed to help teachers, parents, school, and education in general to teach life skills through digital storytelling and facilitate hands-on and digital activities in virtual learning. The format of the modules' activities is anchored on the play-based and learner-centered teaching method to immerse the preschool students in fun, meaningful learning experiences. After the discussion, students will perform the oral activity to practice how they express their thoughts and feelings or insights about the lesson. The hands-on activity and games will be the students' application of the lesson they learned.
